No society appreciated its humanity as much as the classical Greek society. They bequeathed to mankind a priceless idea from which springs much of Western civilization: the Greeks realized what an individual could do. They constructed a liberal civilization which gave individuality paramount expression. The areopagus and the ecclesia developed into organs of political democracy. In his quest for arete—excellence—the Greek achieved his goal, gaining personal honor. The Olympic games rewarded those who silently told of their individuality with glistening muscles. From the amphitheater carved out of the green hill came the raillery of Aristophanes and the eternal tragic notes of Sophocles. At the academy and in the dusty square Plato, Aristotle, Archimedes, and the peripatetic philosophers eagerly shone their powerful lights in the dark enticing regions of the abstruse and the disputable. And over it all loomed Zeus and his semidivine brethren, looking down benignly from lofty Olympus.

To draw this imagery has been easy. The Greek tradition certainly has a magnificent beauty, if nothing else. But what does it all mean? Amid the aesthetic glory there were those who asked. Socrates, for one, would have each man examine his life. In examining our lives we study our heritage, and finding beauty in tradition we may be satisfied. But that is not enough. Though an unexamined heritage petrifies, an unchanged heritage dies. Having examined and learned, we must go forth in quest of our own arete, for our own world. The 1963 Newtonian seeks to charge us with that responsibility. Our victories and our disappointments, our scholastic struggles and our gay events, all the joys of the past year are recorded within its covers. And all are illumined and deepened as we realize the value and the challenge of the Greeks' great gift.

"The unexamined life is not worth living."

Sophocles

DEDICATION

Michael B. Gradone

Aristotle maintained that worthy men led exemplary lives because they devoted their efforts to only a few problems and did not carry many burdens in their minds. We can only wish that the sagacious philosopher could meet the living contradiction to his assertion, a gentleman named Michael B. Gradone. For fourteen years Mr. Gradone has been an outstanding citizen of Newton and leader of Newton High, and his responsibilities have been anything but few.

After graduating from Medford High, Mr. Gradone finished his degree at Salem Teachers College in 1942 and received his Master's in Education from Boston University in 1946. He came to Newton in 1949 and has been here ever since. In addition to teaching in the Business Department, Mr. Gradone was an Assistant Building Supervisor and was in charge of Visual Aids. During our first year at NHS he became Administrative Assistant. In 1961 he realized his desire for a House of his own, becoming Housemaster of Palmer House. Since then, he has devoted himself to Palmer with a whole heart, guiding its Council, supporting its athletic teams, even painting its commons room single-handed. And the sons of Palmer respect Mr. Gradone and admire him for his comprehensive ability, his sense of humor, his out-going interest in everybody, and his vivacious attitude toward life.

But Mr. Gradone belongs to Newton High and to the city as well as to his House. He has supervised graduation exercises for three years, and served as advisor to the Civics Commission. Many future stars of Newton High know Mr. Gradone as a leader of the Babe Ruth League. He was president of the Newton Teachers' Credit Union and presently serves on the Executive Committee of Norumbega Scout Council. In his many community activities Mr. Gradone displays the same friendliness, interest, and joy in living that are so familiar to students of Newton High.

It is hard to believe that Mr. Gradone receives as much as he contributes to the life of Newton High. Yet he claims this is true. He has often said that one of the joys of being a housemaster is coming into contact with many young minds. In gratitude for his inspiration and appreciation for his friendship, we of the Newtonian, on behalf of the students of Newton High, dedicate this record of what we have given and gained to Mr. Gradone.

Superintendent of Schools

The story of the Greek city-state has in it a message which to me has lost none of its clarity through the passage of time. This extraordinary civilization, so rich in its art, architecture, drama, philosophy and literature became the victim of its own success. As Alexander the Great, forgetting, I am sure, some of the lessons learned at the feet of his teacher, Aristotle, built his vast empire stretching from Greece to India, the free Greek cities, to which Aristotle pinned his hopes for human progress, lost their pride and their liberties, never fully to regain them. In a very real way, this great civilization was destroyed from within—destroyed by men who had lost their perspective, and consequently, lost their very way of life.

We face this same danger, as does Nigeria and every other nation which places its faith in the strength of the individual member of that society. Plato talked about the States being made "out of the human natures which are in them." The wisdom of this statement still rings true, and must have meaning for us as we make our individual contributions to the society which we are shaping. Such is our heritage—we dare not do less than value and preserve it.

TENNANT & CO

Mr. Richard W. Mechem
Principal of Newton High School

One of the major purposes of education is to provide individuals with a perspective of the past against which they can plan their future. Since the Greek tradition has provided such a large part of our liberal and democratic civilization, it is appropriate that the class of 1963 should choose this as a theme for its yearbook. The fact that this tradition is continually being questioned and attacked makes its restatement and analysis even more important.

As you, of the class of 1963, move out into different areas of activity, you carry with you the best wishes of all of us at Newton High School. May you successfully preserve the values of our heritage as you face the challenging problems of the future..

"In settled times the traditions of government should be observed, but when circumstances are changing and men are compelled to meet them, much originality is required."

Thucydides

The Student Council has the responsibility of coordinating student activities and representing the students to the administration. Many of its established functions are handled by its four permanent commissions: Civics, Activities, Finance, and Elections; however, most new projects originate in the Council itself. This year in a move to increase efficiency, the Council had a small committee revise its constitution. Many details of Council procedure were incorporated into the by-laws (which are more easily amended than the constitution) and into an operations manual.

The Council undertook several other projects as well. Among these were: (1) an orientation assembly for sophomores; (2) a proposal to open the Newton High Library on Sundays; (3) a proposal to adopt a merit system as the basis for awarding privileges such as commons room study and dismissal during last period study; (4) the establishment of an annual Student Council Scholarship for a worthy senior; (5) a plan to have a prominent public figure speak at NHS; (6) an attempt to institute a training program for officers of all school organizations.

Therefore, the Committee on constitutional revision resolves that the revised constitution be re-revised.

I object. It's the re-revised constitution that needs to be re-revised, not the revised constitution that needs to be re-revised.

Constitution? Huh? What Constitution?

CIVICS COMMISSION

H. Shafran, P. Roberts, S. Klein, S. Levine, L. Kemelgor, S. Crosby, Chairman;
J. Bilezikian, C. Nathan, Secretary; J. Lally, S. Collinson.

"We regard a man who takes no interest in public affairs, not as a harmless, but as a worthless character."

Thucydides (Pericles' Funeral Oration)

The Civics Commission is responsible for management of the cafeteria and the Orange Shield, school grounds, the tunnels, student parking, and traffic. The Commission has initiated improvements in several of these areas. It has attempted to eliminate cafeteria congestion by rerouting traffic. More waste barrels have been distributed in the cafeteria through the efforts of the commission. It has tried to have the tunnels cleaned and to organize a system for picking up the grounds of NHS.

In all of these undertakings the Civics Commission has one goal: to instill in the school a sense of responsibility and a concern for school problems.

ACTIVITIES COMMISSION

"... and to each man the activity in accordance with his own disposition is most desirable."

Aristotle

The Activities Commission coordinates the plethora of student extra-curricular activities through its several boards. This year, the Club Board, in an attempt to weed out the purely nominal clubs and provide better organization for the active ones, reviewed all club charters and requested periodic progress reports from the chartered groups. The clubs were given a special bulletin board on which to advertise their activities. The Assembly-Drama Board arranged to have a well-known political figure come speak to the students of Newton High. The Boys' Athletics Board worked to improve the boys' intramural program and the Girls' Athletic Board began a program of revitalization for girls' sports. All in all this was an active year for the watchdog of activities.

V. Tom, M. Meyer, N. Borenstein, D. Kagan, L. Cerf, D. Kaplan.

FINANCE COMMISSION

"When will the just man be specially useful in handling our money?"

Plato

The Finance Commission oversees all Council projects which involve the spending or the raising of funds. It is responsible for the Council's participation in the Foster Parents Plan: this year Newton High helped support two foster children. To raise the necessary funds (thirty dollars is sent to each child per month), the Finance Commission again sponsored a Bermuda Day when students and faculty who had bought 25¢ tickets could wear bermuda shorts to school. The Commission also sold Newton High bookcovers throughout the year and handled publicity for the Council.

J. Berenson, S. Smith, C. Black, J. Shane, Chairman; S. Finsen, J. Theise.

ELECTIONS COMMISSION

"Man is by nature a political animal."

Aristotle

The Election Commission supervised all school and class-wide elections. This year the Commission initiated several changes in election procedures. To eliminate what had become a popularity contest, the Commission and the administration decided to discontinue sophomore class-wide elections. Instead, the Sophomore Class Committee took over the election of its officers. The Election Commission also made several changes in Spring Election procedure. Student voting was put on an optional basis to encourage more thoughtful balloting, and hopefully, the election of the most competent candidates.

The Year 1963 will fondly be remembered as the year which: 1) was not a leap year (although it had 53 weeks), 2) had more odd days than even days, and 3) could not be turned upside-down and be the same number (try it—it comes out something like 961). It also turned out into the world a mass of people in the guise of Seniors. Certainly other years have had their day (a statement which only the advanced mind of a Senior would dare contemplate) like, for instance, 1961 (which could be turned upside-down) was a pretty good year, but let's put our year to the test, let's send it up the flagpole and see if anybody can find it. Did 1961 have that great Senior assembly in which we were told of documented proof stating the superiority of our balcony for—well—all sorts of things? And I don't know, but it seems to me that the Senior Play came off (or went on) very well (fairly well, anyway) at least under the circumstances. And then, how many Senior Suppers have been sponsored by Salami Companies? And did the football team slosh through and drown Brookline, led by the indomitable de Bush (who, incidently, was the greatest athlete in Newton history, although, unfortunately, never in three years eligible to play, he now lives up in the bushes by the stadium—hence de Bush—and is rarely thought of except when his two dogs come down to bother the Phys. Ed. Classes). And we all have personal memories, like playing hop-sotch in front of Building I, or Blind Man's Bluff in the aquaducts between I and III. And then there's always the Prom and Graduation—and the wonderful memories of the Class of 1963.

"The mixture which is not well shaken decomposes . . ."

Heraclitus

The moulding of a class is begun in Sophomore September when the ingredients are all dumped into the cauldron of NHS, where they swirl blindly until Sophomore June. Then, in the heat of Sophomore Summer, the mixture starts to settle and thicken. By Junior September the critical stage has begun: the settling may bring on stagnation and ultimately, decomposition unless . . .

Unless, of course, it's shaken and shaken good and hard by its class committee. And that, precisely, is what Dave Bliss and his team have done to the class of 1964. Not satisfied with the traditional Junior Prom, the choosing of a class ring, and the heroic Junior Workday effort in sub-freezing weather, the class committee pushed hard working out a novel idea: an Activity Week for Juniors with something happening everyday and special events planned for Monday, Wednesday, and Friday. All the better to keep the Junior Class from any complacent settling to the bottom.

*"Sophos — wise
moros — dull, stupid."*

Any Greek Dictionary

"Sophomore," the English combination of these two Greek words, seems to describe accurately the 10th grader entering Newton High: NHS is too bewildering for any newcomer not to feel the ambiguities of a sophomore. This year the 10th grade Class Committee underwent changes designed to eliminate the "sophomore feeling" sooner by giving more people a chance to take part in the class government and not electing officers until the students knew who was who. The Sophomore Class Committee consisted of two representatives from each homeroom and meetings were conducted by different chairmen selected from the committee several times a year, so that before the May elections, students had seen different leaders in action.

Class activities expanded to a new area: lectures given by students and professional men were introduced for groups of fifty to seventy-five students. The Sophomore Class also held a successful dance and took part in a community service project. We would say that there is considerably more "sophos" than "moros" in this year's Sophomore Class.

ADAMS HOUSE

Housemaster

Mrs. Chartier
Adams House Secretary

Mrs. Russo
Adams House Aide

"A lover of wisdom, then, and high-spirited in temper, and quick and strong, will be a good and true guardian of the city."

Plato

Adams House guards the base of Newton High's towering Acropolis—guards it so well that nobody remembers what's being kept out. At any rate, spirited Adams House is ready for all comers.

Adams House showed its spirit this year in its vigorous House Council. Hard-working committees set up by the Council carried the house activities forward rapidly. The House Assembly Dates Committee planned four assemblies, including an address by Mr. Foster, last year's housemaster, and a one act play. The Constitutional Revision Committee carried on with the eternal task of improving the house constitution. Fund-raising ideas from the Project Committee provided financial support for the many activities.

A major accomplishment of the Adams House guardians this year was the prideful redecoration of the Commons Room. Working from the ground up, under the guidance of dynamic Mr. Easson, Adams' new housemaster, they put new rugs on the floor, then turned to the walls. Giving up precious hours of Christmas vacation time, the Paint Committee put a pleasing, protective new coat of paint around the room. Where else besides Adams House does spirit run so high?

"All is flux, nothing is stationary."

Heracleitus

Bacon House, located in the administration building, land of the auditorium and home of the cafeteria and, all-important, the omnipotent IBM machine, stands a leader among leaders. Under the able guidance of Mr. Swan, this House instituted the much admired and much imitated student government day. Bacon House sponsored a needy family at Christmas time and contributed substantially to the fund for WGBH.

Bacon is proud intellectually and athletically: proud of having the largest number of honor roll students, and proud of winning the interhouse football trophy. Always with an eye to the lighter side, Bacon planned a talent show in conjunction with student government day. Yet this house maintained its dignity at all times. While staunchly resisting a soft drink machine, it planned a rotating art exhibit for the commons room. Independence of thought is the keynote at Bacon House.

Mr. Richard M. Adams
Housemaster

"Beals House students are full of spirit and enthusiasm, and the Beals House faculty is excellent." These are the words of Mr. Adams, who might be a bit biased as Beals' colorful Housemaster.

The Beals House Council this year planned a teacher-student day with a significant theme. The Civics Committee has for two years organized clubs and arranged for tutoring in a settlement house. Although the coke machine, piano, and television helped, it is the Commons Room Committee that has made the Beals House commons room the most liked in the school for club meetings. Students and teachers from the entire school went to the Christmas party planned by the Activities Committee. The Traffic Squad maintains eternal vigilance to prevent collisions on the third floor stairs of venerable Building One.

The spirit of Beals House can be seen in the intramural teams, which have yet to forfeit a game, and which generally have captured first or second place. From its lofty tower Beals looks down at the spectacle of Newton High and feels justly proud of the part it plays.

"Put your shoulder to the wheel. Toil . . . is the sire of fame."

Aesop

Palmer House, under the inspiring leadership of Mr. Gradone (to whom this yearbook is dedicated), is well-known as the owner of the worst coke machine in the school and as the biggest spender of any house. It also claims to be the most active house. The council, under the JACK (J.A.C. Kozlowski) administration, has had two projects for underclassmen: a sophomore reception, and later in the year, a series of discussions in which the seniors related their college applications experiences to sophomores and juniors. Through cake and book cover sales plus the sale of the inimitable Palmer Prodigy pins the council gave gifts to needy families, to AFS, and to the Alcohol Education Foundation. In addition, the students held a sleigh ride, redecorated the Commons Room, put up a suggestion box, and held an essay contest.

RILEY HOUSE

Mrs. Boyd
Riley House Aide

"It is not places that grace men but men that grace the places."

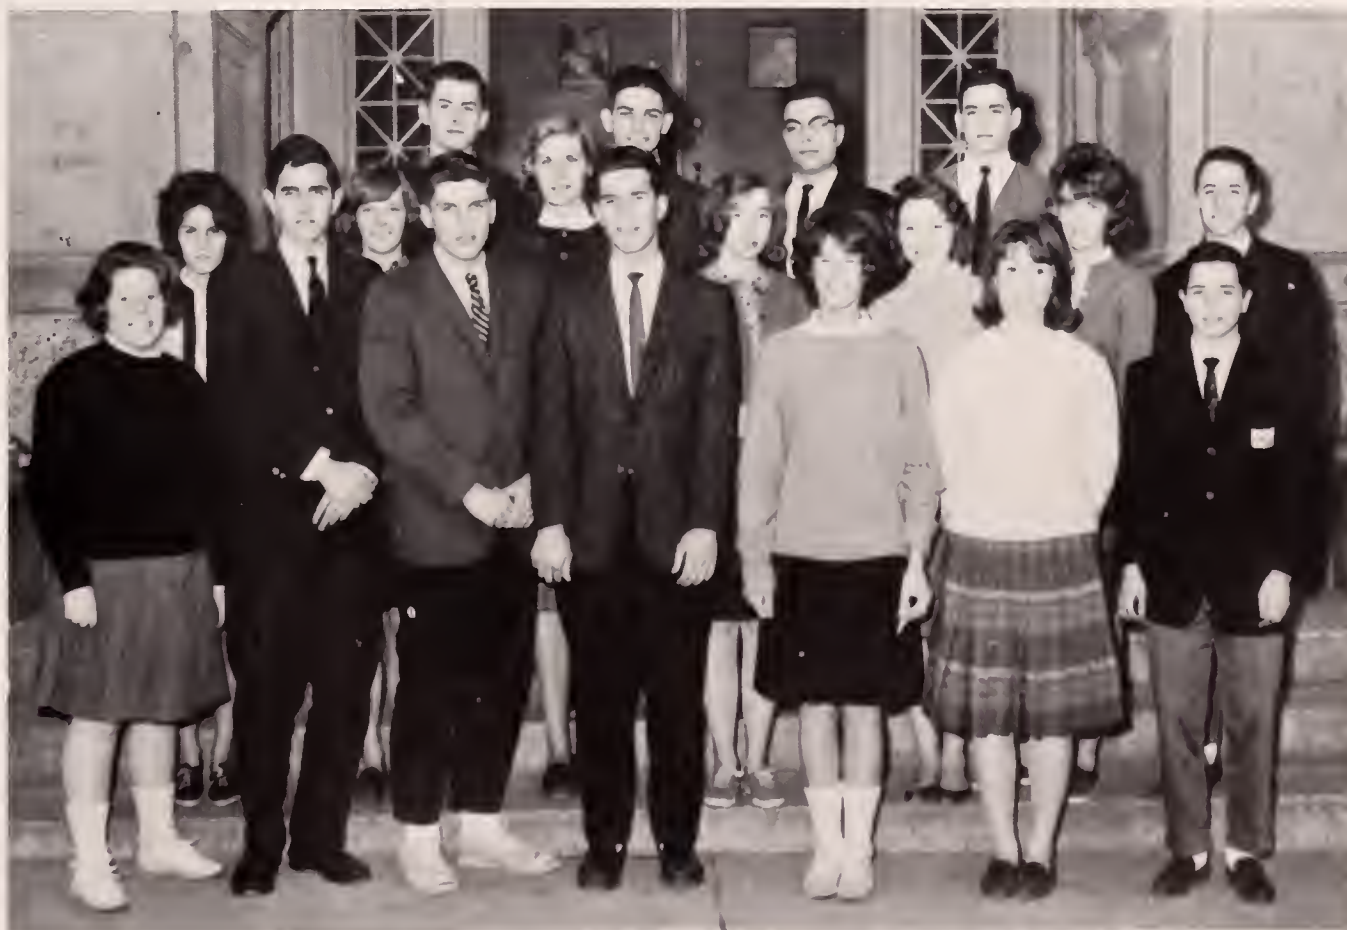

Agesilaus

Occupying the first floor and part of the basement and second floor of Building II, Riley House is noted for many fine classrooms, its spacious study hall, and its offices: it has an impressive and well-coordinated appearance. It is not only the blue-foam lounge chairs gracing the commons room that make Riley House special, but the students and teachers who sit in the chairs and the energetic leadership of Miss Johnson that give this House its distinct character. That Riley House students and faculty always display spirit and a willingness to cooperate with others is reflected in the Riley Council, Smiley Riley Day, its receptions and parties, and its car wash and other projects designed to raise money for needy families and charities. As stated in the Riley House Constitution, the students of Riley House work to stimulate house and school unity by "inspiring and sparking a spirit of cooperation between individuals, classes, house, and school." Wherever they go, Riley's sons are proud of their House and their school.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS DEPARTMENT

The Industrial Arts Department holds forth in the basement of Adams House. There are courses for every interest, including technical drawing, a two-year course which prepares students for engineering schools and post-graduate trade courses. Other courses of the department are Industrial Crafts, which gives students tool experience, and Home Construction, which introduces students to the materials and costs involved in construction. The training given in staging—lighting, scenery, electricity—has been an invaluable part of the dramatic productions at NHS. All in all an imposing amount of work goes on down in the land of saws and blueprints.

Mr. Riciutti, Mr. Chase.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT

"Who knows useful things, not many things, is wise."

Aeschylus

The Business Department concentrates on teaching useful, practical techniques—from the operation of IBM to the development of manual skills. The Department has a twofold job: training future business workers in fundamental secretarial skills like typing and shorthand, and helping students who wish only to increase their efficiency in these skills. Retailing and sales techniques are also part of a carefully-planned program of major and minor courses.

Miss Twiss, Mr. Satlak, Mr. Williams, Mr. Rossi, Mr. Steinhope, Department Head; Mr. Chalmers, Mr. Welles, Miss Altieri, Miss Folley, Mr. Mitchell.

GUIDANCE DEPARTMENT

"Their virtue shall be testified not only by the inscription on stone at home but in all lands wheresoever in the unwritten record of the mind."

Pericles

The Guidance Department is responsible for leading us, or rather pointing out our path through the jungle of blackboards and examinations. Guidance counselors serve as liaison between student and teacher, student and distant administration, student and parents, or student and fellow student. They answer questions and solve problems from "the IBM machine fouled up my schedule" to "what did I get on my SAT's" to "what should I major in at college." The advice of the department is expertly informed and always shows genuine concern for students as individuals.

"Hence the great importance of seeing that the first stories he hears shall be designed to produce the best possible effect on his character."

Plato

The Newton High Library Staff has been equally selective in choosing the books to fill its shelves; hopefully, though, characters have already been formed and the librarians can concentrate on choosing books that will produce "the best possible effect" on students' minds. In selecting these books, the Librarians keep in close contact with all NHS departments to be certain their purchases will relate to the various courses. Besides being able to find the assigned books, students can be confident that they will find the book in when they need it, because of the very convenient reserve system by which books are only allowed out for a short time. The Library also runs an efficient paper-back enterprise. And with all this, the Newton High Library has a staff as interested in its students as in its books. It is always ready to help and sometimes goes to great lengths to secure materials for students.

Seniors, let us only hope we've not been spoiled!

LIBRARY CLUB

The Newton High Library Club performs an indispensable function. The members spend time before and after school and during study periods keeping the library in condition to serve over 2000 students. They help process new books obtained by the Library. They prepare returned books to go back on shelves and then check to see that books are in the right order on the shelves. The members keep the Library's collection of College Catalogues up to date. They send out overdue notices, collect Library passes, and file information in the card catalogues. And for their efforts?—the members learn the materials and procedures of a well-run library.

HOME ECONOMICS DEPARTMENT

"Hestia (Goddess of the Hearth), in all dwellings of men and immortals, yours is the highest honor."

The home is as important a part of our culture as it was in days of the ancient Greeks. The Home Economics Department teaches the students of Newton High the art and science of effective homemaking. Ask the students participating in the courses offered by the department what they have learned and you will get a variety of answers . . . how to bake a cake, how to serve their finished product graciously, and, of course, how to clean up afterwards. Gaining these skills are the goals of the students in the Home Economics courses. In spite of the occasional odor of burnt cookies coming from the "Home Ec" rooms, never underestimate Newton High's budding homemakers. We think these princesses of Hestia know what they're doing.

COLLEGE RECORDS DEPARTMENT

Mrs. Calnan, Mrs. Copeland, Mrs. Gilbert

"Not snow, nor rain, not heat, nor gloom of night stays these couriers from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

Herodotus

How true and how reassuring a thought this is our college-bound seniors can testify. All that one had to do was deliver those awesome sheets of paper entitled "school transcript form" and "principal's report" to the room behind the door saying "College Records Office" and breathe a little sigh of relief while walking out of the room. One knew that every single one of those sheets would pass through the typewriters of the efficient college records' staff. Thanks to this invaluable staff from the Class of 1963.

"Our characters are the result of our conduct."

The members of the National Honor Society began the year by trying to rewrite the speeches used in the Induction Ceremony and immediately found that Character, Leadership, Scholarship, and Service—the four qualities considered in the Society's selection process—were very difficult subjects to discuss and evaluate. Finding activities was much easier. The members spent two evenings bowling and skating at Perkins Institute for the Blind, collected money for the Heart Fund around Newton, and held a booksale to raise funds for a school in Washington, D.C., to enable the students of that school to buy some books for themselves. And somehow, the members found that living up to those four qualities was easier and far more rewarding than trying to define them.

Aeschylus

A good portion of the 1963 Newtonian records the histories of the many extra-curricular activities at NHS. Although these groups, clubs, and staffs are created and operated by students, they would have had a dismal story were it not for the Club Advisors.

The advice, the patience, and the insight of our faculty advisors has been invaluable. We students of Newton High thank them for many enriching experiences and wonderful memories.

NEWTON TECHNICAL HIGH SCHOOL

ADMINISTRATION

Mr. Orrin M. Brawn
Acting Director

Anthony N. Penta
Assistant to the Director

"Vocal to the wise, but for the crowd they need interpreters."

Pindar

Understanding the purpose and methods of Newton Technical High School requires a very different interpretation of high school from that accepted by most students at Newton High. Students enter Tech High in either the ninth or tenth grade after proving their ability on a mechanical aptitude test. They are free to enter any one of the eight shops: automobile, drafting, electrical, electronics, machine, mill carpentry, printing, or sheet metal. They spend six hours a day every other week in their shops and then attend "related" classes in which the theory of each field is taught in addition to regular high school English and social studies classes.

An important function of Tech High is locating jobs for its graduates—90% of the students get their first post-graduate jobs through Tech High placement. In order to be sure the students are qualified to handle jobs involving the most recent developments in their fields, Tech High has representatives in industry who relate the latest advances and enable the school to get the newest equipment. All the machinery is identical to that used in industry.

Tech High's purpose is to train students in their chosen area so that, upon graduation, they can begin work, not dependent on any further education to make a living (although some do go on either by going to technical institutions regularly or working days and studying at night). The teaching has as its basic plan presenting the students with a job situation. As soon as the boys understand the fundamentals of their shop, they are given actual jobs, and in the senior year, on the cooperative plan, they can go out on regular paying jobs during their shop week. Thus, while each shop provides specialized training for its students, all the departments in Tech High work to produce independent young men.

IN MEMORIAM

Russell P. Lupien

AUTOMOBILE

In the Automobile Department, as in the others which involve a knowledge of machine parts the boys, working from scratch, learn to put together and to take apart automobiles. The students learn all the parts of the car, how to "diagnose" and repair broken parts. They begin working on springs and tires in their first year and by their senior year have learned the idiosyncracies of electric transmissions.

The department accepts work on outside cars; when the boys are studying clutch jobs, for instance, any clutch in need of repair in Newton is welcomed. Tech High patrons must supply their own parts, but pay only 20% of the outside labor cost. The first year, boys do some work on Tech-owned chassis, but after that they work on only real cars—on everything from front-end alignment to tune-ups.

One of the annual skill tests is the Chrysler Corporation trouble shooting contest in which two boys from each technical high school in Massachusetts are given new Plymouths with fifteen or twenty malfunctions or "trolls" in each and the boys must put them in "delivery condition" as quickly as possible. The contest was held in Newton this year because Newton was the winner last year.

DRAFTING

Drafting is the basis for creating any part: all machinists do their work from a draftsman's drawings. For this reason, all drafting students spend some time in the machine shop while the machine students learn the fundamentals of drafting in their related course. The drafting students begin with a course in lettering, and then go to work on actual drawings. They are given a lay-out, which is often just a sketch from the designer and from it determine the detailing and exact dimensions and produce the drawing, which, in its final form, looks like a blueprint used in constructing the actual machine. One of the thrills of visiting Tech High is seeing a job completed through the combined efforts of several shops: the drawings from the drafting shop are brought either to mill carpentry, sheet metal, or machinery, and from these shops comes the finished product. Mr. Benson showed that the draftsman knows what is meant by the "intricacies of life today" when he explained with pride the creation he designed: a handkerchief folder.

Mr. Benson

ELECTRICAL

The basis of both the electric and electronics departments is a knowledge of the fundamental principles of electricity, but the applications of the two fields are different. The boys in electric must work with large amounts of power harnessed for lights and other wiring, motors and other heavy industrial devices. First year boys do a series of projects in the shop, learning about, for example, various types of light switches and doorbell wiring. In eleventh and twelfth grades, the students do maintenance and installation work throughout the city's schools.

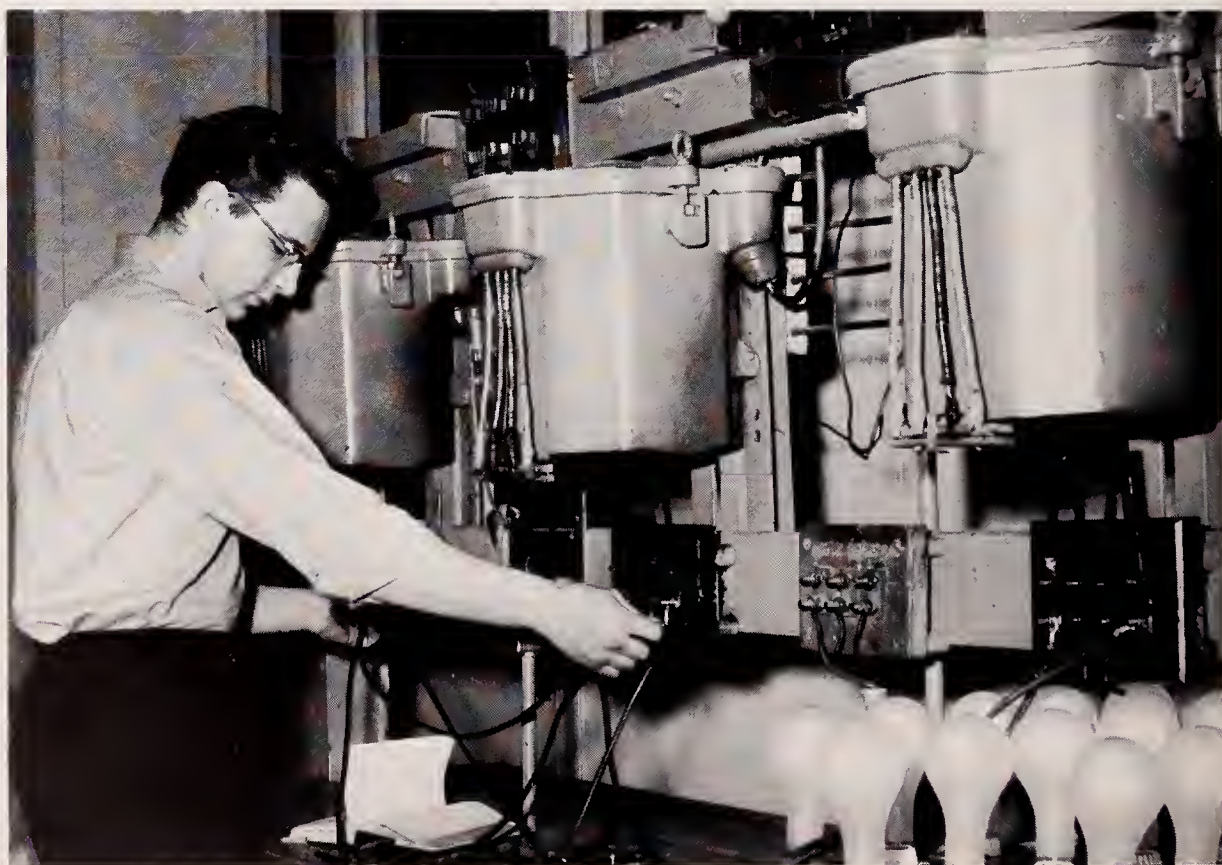

Mr. Gilmore

Mr. DiPoli

Mr. Hale

ELECTRONICS

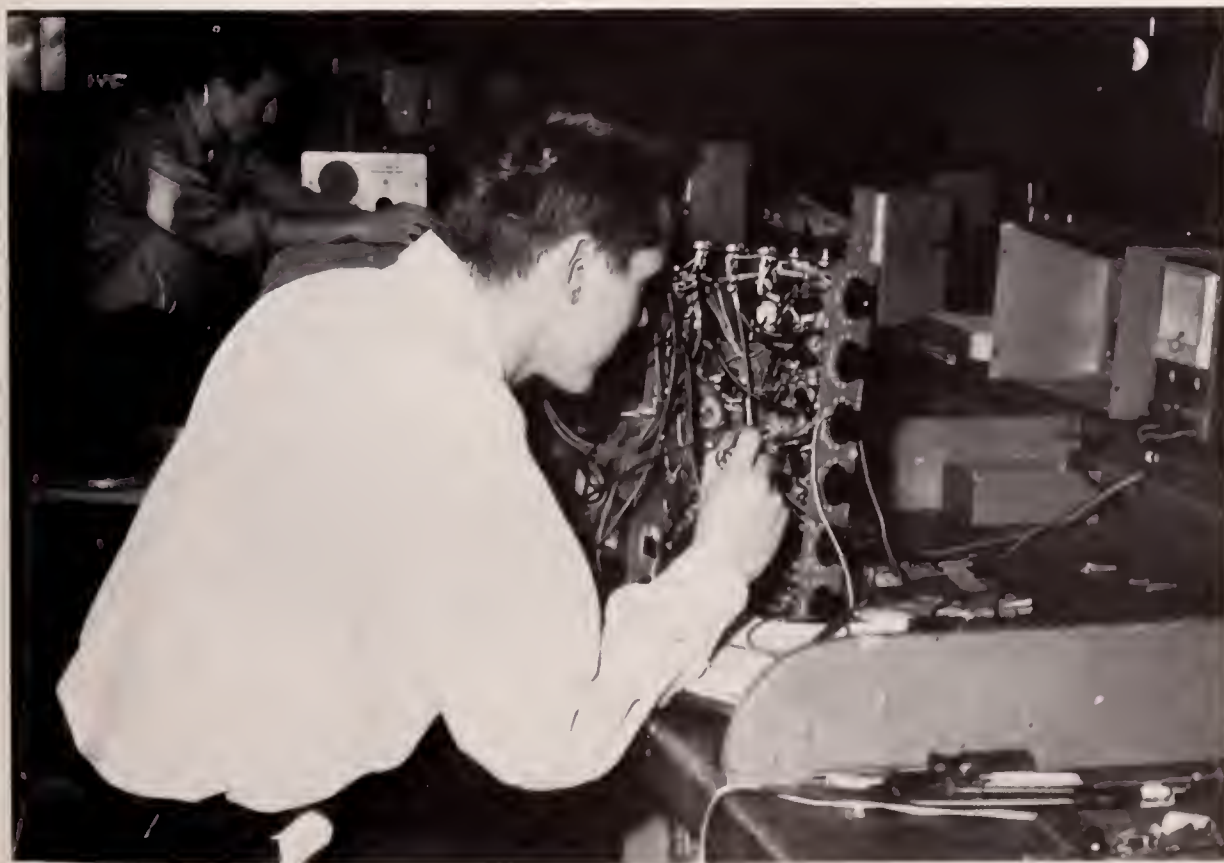

Electronics, a recent field, is expanding rapidly. It began as communications, but now that is only one small branch of the electronic studies, which include industrial and medical electronics, and the new bionics. The last involves the use of electricity in biological studies. The Electronics Department offers the fundamentals for all these areas, but while they are in high school, the boys can only do applications in the areas of communications, and, in the latter part of their senior years, in industrial electronics (away from school). There is much evidence of their work in communications from the sign "WNHS" above the door to the benches piled high with amplifiers, radios, and television sets. Besides their shop and related courses, the electronics students do laboratory work in which they use a special kit to experiment with basic electronics.

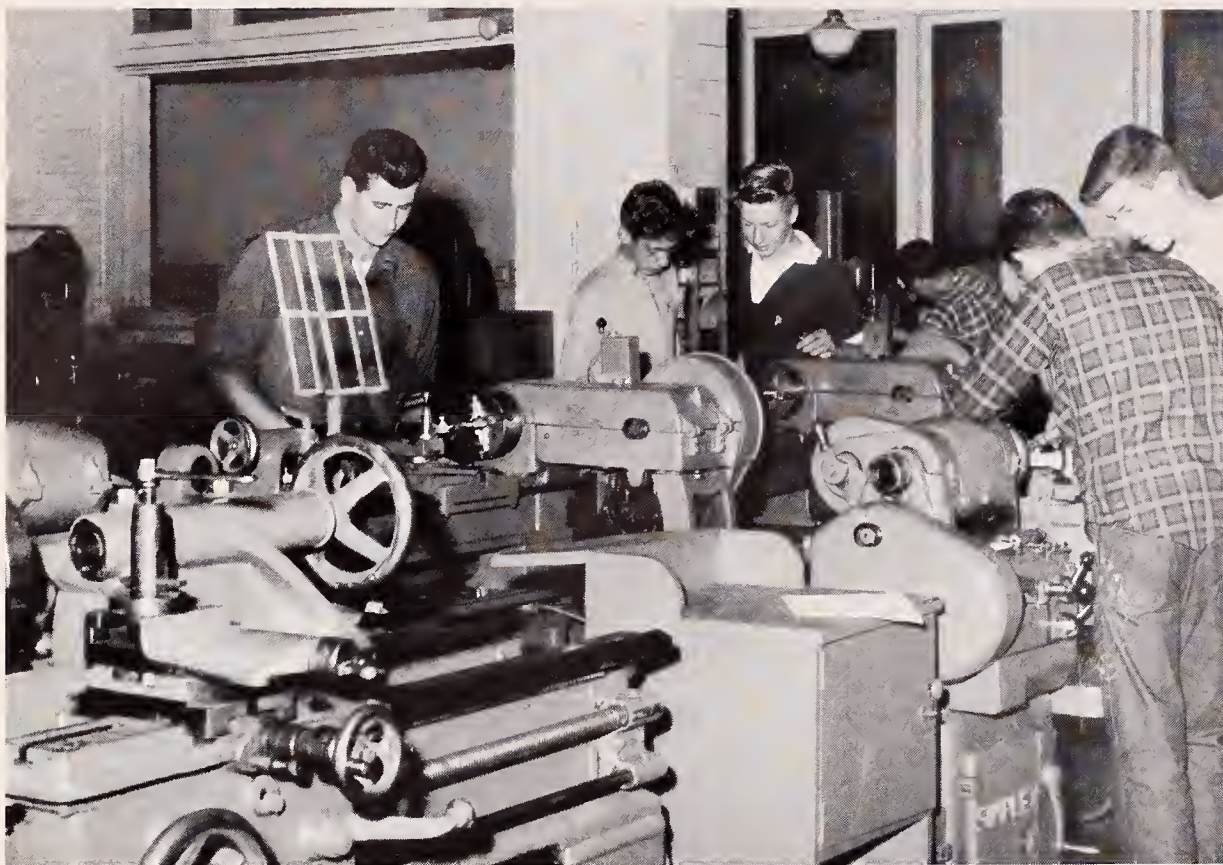

Mr. Gardner

Mr. Cioni

Mr. Somerville

MACHINE

Machinists do not just operate one machine, but are trained to use all machines to produce parts. Their job is similar to the tailor's, who must make not just one sleeve or pocket but the whole suit. The machinist works from a pattern made by the draftsman to produce a prototype, or sample. Many machine jobs require precise measuring, and students in this department learn how to use tools like the micrometer. They work with materials such as steel, brass, bronze, copper, and synthetic white nylon. Students learn how to deal with these materials using industrial lathes and milling machines.

Mr. Doherty

Mr. Johnstone

Mill carpentry is the study of building from wood. The boys first work to produce bird houses, stools, chests. By their senior year they can do detailed work on furniture. Amid the scent of sawdust and scattered wood chips, the students learn to use hard tools (saws, hammers) in their first year and later begin with power saws, shapers, sanding machines. They do projects for the city of Newton as well as for charities and Boys Clubs.

Mr. Sullivan

MILL CARPENTRY

Mr. Houle

PRINTING

Printing department students learn how to set type and operate printing presses. They often value their own "slugs" of type from melted lead which they cast into letters. When they finish with the lead, they send it out to be remelted so that it can be used again. These students do the printing of such official documents as report cards and the school department publication, Patterns. The pride of the printing shop is this year's acquisition: the off-set room. In here the students, by placing a metal print produced from the photograph negative in the press, reproduce anything that can be photographed without using type.

Mr. Reppucci

Mr. Moore

Mr. Mangan

SHEET METAL

In this department students work from drawings to produce finished products in metal: besides sheets of metal, they use bar and rod stock, angle iron, and expanded metal (such as that used in grill work). Such products are used in heating, ventilating, and the electronics industry while others are simply ornamental. The boys begin working on simple geometric shapes and move up to more complex and irregular forms. They must learn when to use and how to handle tools like power-presses, squaring sheers, rotary machines, hand and power hack saws, and the oxygen-acetylene torch. Besides learning the regular drafting procedures and the way to produce the finished work from the drawing, the students must learn the intermediate step of pattern developing—drawing the design on the metal itself, allowing for changes in the shape of the metal after it is bent.

"... they must adhere chiefly to the education which makes them able to question and answer scientifically."

Plato

True to the dynamism of science itself, the Science Department improved the science teaching in the Newton school system with bold new programs.

Team teaching in chemistry was successfully introduced this year. CBA and ChemStudy, easily the finest high school chemistry courses in America, were blended to give Newton High students the best parts of both. Team teaching will be expanded in the future.

A two-year course called Unified Science that combines physics, chemistry, and biology went into operation. Under a Ford Foundation grant, the Newton Science Project will expand Unified Science to cover introductions to the major sciences from kindergarten to grade 12, eliminating the present system's duplication and permitting courses in the individual sciences to start at more advanced levels.

The idea of actually teaching science (not memorized mysticisms) in science courses is a revolutionary concept in secondary education. In its many projects, our Science Department has pioneered in applying the new philosophy.

MATHEMATICS DEPARTMENT

"This ... which is used ... by all arts and all sciences and ways of thinking ... I mean, in short, number and calculation."

Plato

Mathematics has increased tremendously in importance since Plato's time. The subject has gone far beyond geometry and real number algebra to include statistics, decision-making, vectors and matrices, and most of logic itself. Modern mathematical education trains the ability to handle the formal languages of axiomatic systems and is as essential to liberal education as English: mathematics provides clear languages specifically tailored to various human needs.

As mathematics and its applications grow, the Mathematics Department must grow and change too. Hence Math I-5 with probability and linear algebra, Computers with computer programming, and more UICSM and MSG material were taught this year, and old-fashioned "mathematics" (which the age has left behind) has been abandoned to a great extent. The department's progress is sure to continue as mathematics moves forward.

CHEMISTRY CLUB

"I sought and stored and stole the fount of flame, Whence men all arts have learned, a potent help."

Aeschylus

Even though Zeus had Prometheus chained to a rock to be tortured externally for his kindness, the errant Titan would rejoice at seeing how the Chemistry Club used the fire he rebelliously gave mankind. The hot flames of Bunsen, Tirrell, Fisher, and Meker burners activated scores of reactions as the group titrated and nitrated, analyzed and oxidized, catalyzed and hydrolyzed, and weighed and "Oi vey! -ed" its chemicals.

Keeping pace with their science in an age when the frontiers of chemistry are in organic compounds and man must turn to the oceans for vital materials after exhausting land sources, the amateur chemists spent much of their time extracting iodine from seaweed and analyzing the composition of sea water.

"Give me a lever long enough and a fulcrum strong enough, and single-handed I can move the earth."

Archimedes

The Physics Club, in the spirit of modern science, moved from scansion of the heavenly bodies to the exploration of some subatomic particles. After searching through closets and attics for two months seeking an old issue of Scientific American, the Club, having found the necessary article, went to work on a bubble chamber. All of the members contributed time and loot to construct the final product—a super-heated bubble-maker. The club also planned a field trip to view the work of new scientific equipment. All in all, a successful year for these devotees of Archimedes.

ALPHA GAMMA TAU

"I have hardly ever known a mathematician who was capable of reasoning."

Plato, The Republic

This year's Mathematics Club has been more dynamic than many of its predecessors. After several months of reorganization, the club initiated a program of lectures, conducted mainly by students, which was designed to promote an appreciation of mathematics as an aesthetic experience rather than merely as a convenient shorthand for the solution of business and scientific problems. An encouragement to independent work was the printing of a list, formulated by the president, of interesting problems of varying degrees of difficulty. These problems, chosen to relate to the lectures, provided further study of the notions of "elegance" and "inherent interest" in mathematics. This year Alpha Gamma Tau fulfilled its charter obligation to stimulate interest in mathematics and explore modern thinking. There was an insight in the club discussions which often cannot be found in the classroom.

Wittgenstein
(Note to editor: No Greek wrote in German, O.K.?)

Germany and Germanic Austria have contributed much to Western civilization. Kant, Hegel, Heidegger, and Wittgenstein in philosophy; Leibniz, Riemann, Frege, and von Neumann in mathematics; Helmholtz, Weber, Heisenberg, and Einstein in science; and Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, and Wagner in music are only a few of the Teutonic greats.

"Der Deutsche Verein" studied the German language and culture with a lecture by the local German consul, a German movie, conversation in German, cultural discussions, and German food and music.

"Eureka!"

Archimedes

The story has it that Archimedes discovered the principles of buoyancy while doing impromptu research in his bath tub and then tore through the streets shouting "eureka!" ("I found it!"). The Independent Research Group this year carried on in Archimedes' tradition of curiosity and alertness—hoping always for a chance to say "eureka."

Working independently, the researchers began their project in Mr. Wells' madcap laboratory with the aid of the proprietor's equipment and MIT humor. Mrs. Bailey counseled the biologists. The amateur scientists completed their work in various specialized labs, some of them at Harvard University.

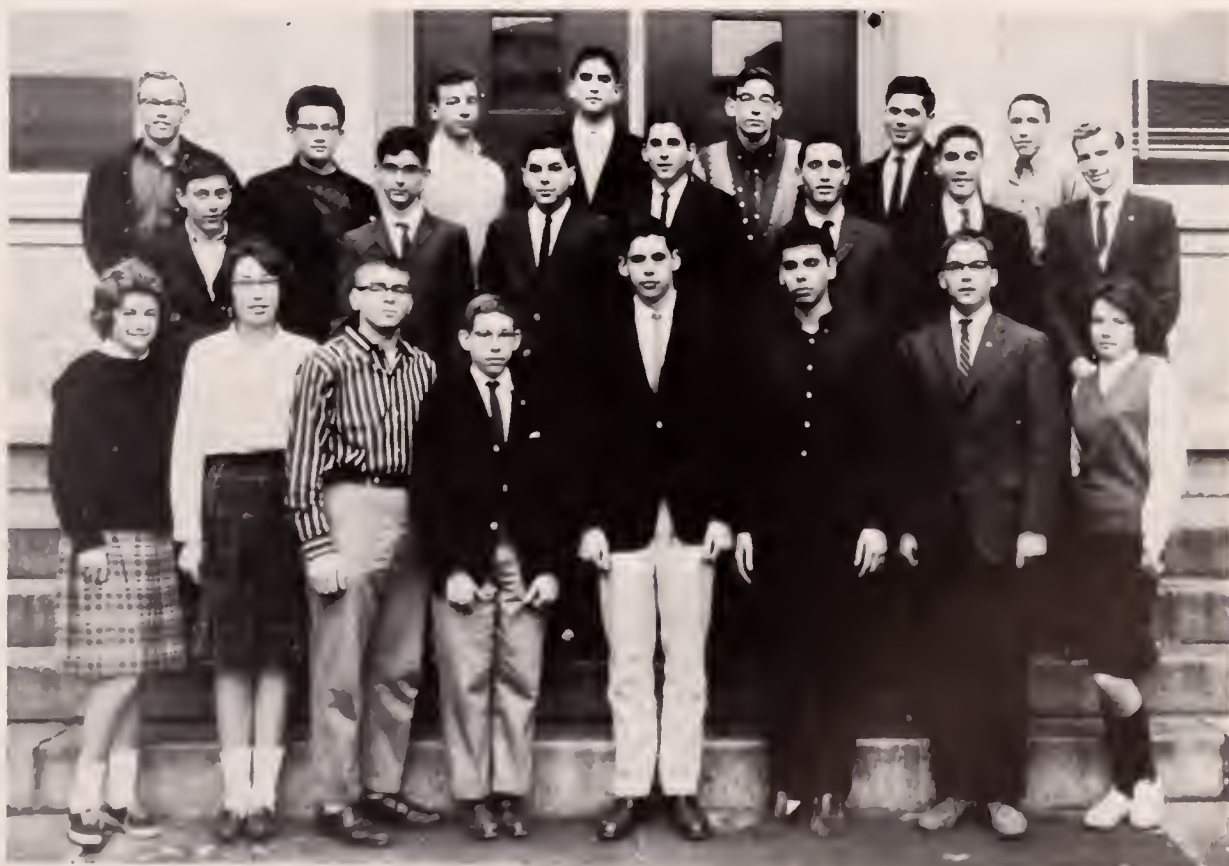

The members came to appreciate the fundamental principles of experimentation, including "what can go wrong will," "what cannot go wrong will probably do so anyway," and "what has gone wrong will get worse." Planning their own experiments, righting what went wrong, and explaining the results, the Independent Researchers enjoyed an experience in creative science.

"The lightboned birds and beasts that cling to cover; the lithe fish lighting their reaches of dim water, all are taken tamed in the net of men's mind."

Sophocles

Are you troubled because you can't tell the difference between a dicot and a monocot, or you can't distinguish between your tibia and your fibula? You should have belonged to the Biology Club, the one club that exclusively studies living things. Also, for those aristocratically inclined, the Biology Club offers life replete with a built-in hierarchy, including such classifications as kingdoms, phylums, species, and families. There is truly a place for everyone in Biology.

"What messenger could bring the news so fast?"

Aeschylus

Modern civilization often makes use of radio, especially in telecommunications. Artificial satellites and deep space probes receive instructions and telemeter information by radio; ships and planes use radio in LORAN navigation; military communications require radio's flexibility. Radio frequency current is used in particle accelerators to study atomic nuclei.

The members of the Radio Club did everything with radios but eat them. The hams' experience in transmitting and receiving messages, working with radio components, and applying the principles of electronics is certain to be of interest and use to them in their later lives.

"I scan the pageant of Night's starry populace . . . the shining constellations."

Aeschylus

Peering across inconceivably vast stretches of time and space, astronomers from NHS looked upon the universe at large. They braved the cold night air to scrutinize the spectacle, recorded the motions of its players, and tried to understand it. Indoors the club heard lectures, such as a talk on meteorites, by astronomers, and studied astronomical topics.

Why should one pore over the centuries' old light of unreachable stars? Because the very big, like the very small, is a strict testing ground for theories; because of what happens inside a person when he sees how insignificant his whole galaxy is in the universe; because the universe IS and dares the mind of man to understand it.

"The operation of the intellect aims at no end beyond itself and finds in itself the pleasure which stimulated it to further operation . . . in it must be perfect happiness."

Aristotle

Some of us may not realize that such bliss was experienced regularly in the walled-off section of the cafeteria by minds wrapped in thought over a checkered board. Perhaps the players themselves forgot their bliss sometimes, especially when a dastardly trick had just cost them their queen. But for such times of trial and frustration, they have compensating moments of triumph, when the fool across the board makes the move they have been anticipating and they pounce upon his hapless king. And in this glory they will agree with Aristotle that here lies "perfect happiness."

LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT

"What shall I say? Instruct me in your meaning."

Aeschylus

The Language Department offers four-year instruction in French, Latin, and for the first time in many years, in German. There are three-year courses in Spanish and Russian. No other languages will be introduced in the next few years; instead, for well-prepared students more extensive courses in these languages will be given, starting with a fifth-year French class next year.

Learning a language requires four basic skills: oral and reading comprehension, writing, and speaking. All four are taught, but the two "passive" ones (oral and reading comprehension) are emphasized, because they are the skills most likely to be retained after the student has ceased formal study.

Students are becoming more aware of and concerned about their position in the world, if language department statistics are indicators. Ten years ago, 1400 students took foreign languages, while this year, between the two high schools (3900 students), 3200 have a language elective.

LANGUAGE LABORATORY

LANGUAGE LABORATORY ASSISTANT
Mrs. Barry

LANGUAGE LABORATORY ASSISTANT
Mrs. Ebb

"We have two ears and one mouth that we may listen the more and talk the less."

Zeno

Zeno never visited the language laboratory, where speaking and listening share equal time. The lab is now three years old, and this year over 1000 NHS students learned how to carry on a conversation with a tape recorder.

The lab is still a very controversial tool for language learning. Its opponents think that the tapes only produce parrots and that the stereotype sort of conversation (greeting you teaching, naming your family—largely being eliminated from NHS tapes) takes away completely the student's interest, already diminished by the idea of learning from a machine. Its supporters feel that, although it definitely is not a substitute for true interchange between teacher and student, it provides the student with the individual practice in oral comprehension and speaking rarely possible in the classroom.

FRENCH CLUB

"Example is always more efficacious than precept."

Aesop

In some courses at Newton High School, students learn material they think they will never use. Not so in foreign languages. To travel abroad and investigate a country's literature, customs, and people, il faut savoir la langue.

To become skilled in a language, students must come in contact with all aspects of it. The aim of the French Club is to introduce students to practical French through example rather than through theory. At informal meetings, students speak French, an opportunity often not available in the classroom. Through this close contact with the language, members strengthen their vocabularies and develop an appreciation for the rhythmic and romantic qualities of French.

This year, members of the French Club enjoyed an evening visit to a French restaurant, heard many guest speakers, and held discussion groups and other social activities. Tout pour mieux savoir la langue francaise.

D. Lipinsky, L. Friedman, M. Calk, Secretary; S. Scrimshaw, President; J. Weinstein, L. White, Vice-President; Mr. DeFelix. Missing: E. Stuart, N. Avery.

The Spanish Club has initiated many projects which it hopes to continue through next year. The club hopes to maintain its flexible meeting date to avoid conflict with the many other extra-curricular activities. After reorganizing the club, the members tried to supplement classroom learning by individual and group readings in Spanish poetry. The club sponsored meetings with other language clubs to see the values shared by all foreign language students. All was not travail, as any member who took advantage of the free refreshments at all the meetings could tell you.

Through these activities, the members practiced their business Spanish and enriched their knowledge of the language and culture of Spanish-speaking countries.

LATIN CLUB

"Who neglects learning in his youth loses the past and is dead to the future."

Aristotle

The members of the Latin Club keep the past alive, enlivening Caesar, Cicero, and Virgil through their various activities. Slides, discussions and even plays contribute to make the Latin Club meetings lively and interesting. Many a new member can say "veni, vidi, remansi."

RUSSIAN CLUB

To locate the Russian Club one only has to listen for strains of Moscow nights coming from some commons room. To broaden its knowledge of Russian culture, the group regularly listened to people who have lived or travelled in the Soviet Union. During the year the club attended Russian films, held an evening party in December and a picnic in June. In order to raise money to finance these ventures, the club sponsored a popular cookie sale and thus brought a bit of Russia to the hungry part of Newton High.

"'Why in the world should I cobweb my days,' I cried, 'with the work of Old Man History?'"

Marcus Argentarius

The Social Studies Department has plenty of reasons. The curriculum of the Social Studies Department places a heavy emphasis upon history. The emphasis—a conviction that the way in which we meet the crises and dilemmas of our own time—is largely the product of past thoughts and actions. The Department offers every student, therefore, the opportunity to study and understand the heritage of Western Civilization. At the same time, the aim of the Department is to increase skill in reading, outlining, map-reading, and summarizing. The ability to think logically and critically in the interpretation of historical events and evidence is emphasized. The hope is that a thoughtful consideration of man's past experience aids clear thinking about the great issues that confront the American people today.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB

"How prone to doubt, how cautious are the wise."

The International Club gives students the opportunity to broaden their background knowledge in current events. At the regular meetings, members listen to and question speakers which have included students, missionaries, and teachers or officials of the State Department. This year the International Club established discussion groups led by teachers of the high school. These informal groups enabled students to assess and analyze their opinions and to engage in debate.

The International Club prepares and organizes groups for various model United Nations. Two such model United Nations are held locally at Harvard and Boston College. Another, the East Coast Model United Nations Conference, for which the International Club raises funds, is the year's largest project. This year Newton High represented Nigeria in the East Coast Model U.N. These United Nations conferences are the culmination of the students' experience in thinking internationally.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

"They who educate children well are more to be honored than they who produce them."

Aristotle

In addition to its regular functions, the English Department is working on a new program for terminal students. This program seeks to broaden the literary experience of those students who end their formal educations with high school. The general plan is to divide the study called "English" into three sections: sophomore classes will approach English from the view point of the linguist, so that the realization of specific facts about the language will lead to certain generalizations by the end of the year; junior classes will concentrate on reading, both mechanics and appreciation; and senior classes will study English as an element of the humanities, using visual arts, music, and history to fortify a program emphasizing drama and poetry.

Miss Lanigan, head of the English Department, estimates that it will take six years to put this program into effect, for the implementation of such a program requires considerable teacher-retraining as well as reconstruction course plans. English teachers are now developing class studies in their fields of specializations, experimenting in class situations with these methods, and evaluating the results of their experiments with the others in the department.

SECOND ROW: Mr. Walker, Mr. Zeeb, Mr. Papa, Mr. Kaestle, Mr. Jacobs, Mrs. Bendall, Miss Kenney, Miss Weinstein, Mr. Warshaw, Miss Kurson, Mr. Bissex, Mr. Harrer, Mr. Rothman, Mr. Fleishman. Missing: Miss Axelrod, Mr. Boyle, Miss Feinberg, Mr. Johnson, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Marshall, Mr. Pappa, Mr. Wolf.

READING CLINIC

Miss Rideout, Mr. Carey.

"Eyes are bad witnesses to men if they have souls that understand not their language."

Heracleites

The Reading Clinic at NHS has tried to let everyone in on the fabulous secrets of the printed word. Those students having difficulty with reading skills were offered remedial courses in all phases of reading, from eye movement to study methods. The clinic also offered developmental courses for good readers who wished to increase their speed, comprehension, and vocabulary. And what is the advice of the clinic? Read, read, read!

TUSITALA

*"Praise, of course, is best
Plain speech breeds hate
But, ah, the attic honey of telling
A man just what you think of him."*

It is not often that men volunteer to have their throats cut. Yet the members of Tusitala stick their literary necks out for just that purpose. When each member submits his best writing for dissection and analysis by his fellow members, he gets a complete and trenchant criticism. In fact, he often feels that the criticism is rather more complete than is deserved, and itches to wield the ax himself at the next meeting.

Far from being a Mutual Butchery Society, however, Tusitala is more like a college of young surgeons, where struggling young Homers are given corrective criticism. Ah— and what ennobling pain that is.

DEBATING SOCIETY

"Do you then be reasonable."

Socrates

All that the debaters of Newton High ask of their opponents is that they be reasonable. Not necessarily informed, intelligent, or skilled in debating; merely reasonable enough to recognize the wisdom and verity of our team's argument: Should the opponents be clever or stubborn, the Newton Debater will use all the weapons at his command: file cards to wave, quotes from Kennedy speeches, and a memory like the recording Secretary of the Internal Revenue Service (to keep all the points straight in his orderly mind).

This year, with the forming of the twelve school Greater Boston Debate League, Newton debaters have been reasoning, card-waving, and shoe-banging as never before. Under the efficient administration of Tom Weiskel and a new coaching staff of Miss Savage and Messrs. Hall and Livingston, the Society compiled an impressive record of successful persuasion and argumentation.

ARTS

SENIOR PLAY

"Remember that you are an actor in a play, and the playwright chooses the manner of it . . . If he wants you to act a poor man you must act the part with all your powers, and so on if your part be a cripple or a magistrate or a plain man. For your business is to act the character that is given you and act it well."

Aristotle

The melodrama returned to Newton High this year avec grand succes: the lovely heroine, victim of the crafty villain and his accomplice until she is saved by the brave hero, the contemptuous young man who is much too fearless to win the admiration of the heroine, the two young things whose shrieks terrify the audience, the mysterious, silent servant who somehow seems to know everything, the doctor whose assurances bring sighs of relief from the audience, and the easy-going unsuspecting soul who fell to his fate from behind the wall—all were a part of the The Cat and the Canary.

As usual, the presentation depended upon the efforts of many non-cast workers. It was a real class production. Over 100 seniors worked on committees for publicity, staging, costumes, set design, properties, ushers and ticket sales. Cracking the whip over all was chairman Bob Alter, who talked everyone into going with his inscrutable but incontrovertible logic.

DRAMA

There was an international flavor to the tenth annual Drama Festival. The evening started with a NHS production, The Heiress, adapted from Henry James' novel Washington Square. Out of the cast of five, four received awards for outstanding performances: Carolyn Bloom, Diane Kagan, Harlan Schneider, and Irving Kornfield. We couldn't decide whether we were in England or America, but then neither could Henry James. We just were sure that we had been treated to an outstanding performance when the curtain fell as Carolyn mounted the stairs and Irv knocked . . .

Then we were carried swiftly to the ancient Mediterranean and the isle of Argos where Agamemnon was returning from the Trojan fray. Jack Richardson's The Prodigal powerfully portrayed Agamemnon's tragic return. Awards for acting excellence were presented to Joan Abrahams, Marc Cornblatt, Roberta Boynick, Brian Simblist, and Adrienne Miller.

Then came the climax with the presentation of Kao-Tong-Kia's Lute Song. The brilliantly colorful scenery, short scenes, and slower pace made the Oriental setting unusual and polished. James Callanan, Edward Silvers, Marilee Wyman, Jay Theise, Michael Zolli, and Jon Margolis won awards. Oh, we almost forgot, Lute Song was announced as the winner. Congratulations to the faithful worshippers of the Sun of Heaven.

FESTIVAL

DRAMA CLUB

"Drama we say, represents the acts and fortunes of human beings."

The Drama Club is the stage struck portion of Newton High. This club discusses plays and acting techniques and also becomes acquainted with the more prosaic aspects of the theater such as lighting, staging, and sound effects. The members put on skits and short plays to learn the various techniques involved in the theater. The Drama Club tries, informally, to foster poise and self-confidence in its members through small productions and readings. The Drama Club is valuable for those seriously interested in the stage and it offers an enjoyable and broadening experience to everyone at NHS.

The Newton High Stage Crew is responsible for all the unheralded behind the scenes preparation and work which we accept so casually when the curtain raises. The Stage Crew aids in preparing the dances, plays, and assemblies presented at Newton High. The students in the group receive training in lighting, staging, and sound effects. Individual creativity is stressed. The Stage Crew has remarkable enthusiasm and spirit, actively engaged as it is in many school functions.

ART DEPARTMENT

Down in the deep, dark, hot-and-cold-running-water recesses of the basement in Building I resides the Art Faculty. In several rooms hollowed out of brick, stone, and concrete block these dedicated teachers expose the student body of Newton High School to the wonders, glories, and intricacies of things seen with the eyes. Under these people's tutelage nimble fingers spend long hours arranging shapes on paper, peas and beans on plywood, threads on burlap, clay on potter's wheels, and colors on canvas. The Art Department also serves the school and the community by providing sets for school dramatic productions, art work for school publications, and advertising for school activities.

"This is the tale I pray the divine muse to unfold; Begin it, goodness, at whatever point you will."

Homer

Which muse was Homer entreating to help him in retelling his stories of glorious heroes, maidens and conflicts? Possibly he was referring to the muse of music: can not music tell a story, paint a landscape of emotions, inflict or soothe a wounded spirit? Does not music bring happiness and satisfaction?

The goal of the Newton High School music department is to introduce all interested students to the many faces of music, so that they will be able to enrich themselves and others through their appreciation of music and skill in performing and understanding it. The Music Department is comprised of major classes in appreciation and theory, choirs, band and orchestra, and various ensembles. In these classes, pupils come to understand the many types of musical composition. In addition, through the enjoyment gained from participation in music, students experience the beauty and richness that music brings to life.

MUSIC CLUB

"For we are lovers of the beautiful, yet simple in our tastes and we cultivate the mind without loss of manliness."

Thucydides

The Music Club, in the precise words of Mr. Lasker, its advisor, is "for those who love music." The size of the organization indicates that Newton High has a goodly number of music lovers. The club holds several concerts during the year, including a performance of original compositions by members of the music theory classes in the spring. Guest performers often entertain at meetings of the club. The proceeds from these concerts are used for scholarships awarded to a boy and girl planning to pursue an education in music.

CHRISTMAS PROGRAM

"Hear them croak, jubilant, their chant of joy."

Aeschylus

The annual Christmas program at NHS, given on December 9, was unusually fine this year. There were performances by the A Capella Choir, the Madrigals, and the Orchestra. Leslie Claff thrilled the crowded hall with her performance of a flute concerto, and Donald Drourr skillfully piloted the orchestra through a contemporary work. Our brass ensemble joined a Harvard brass ensemble to accompany the Choir in a stirring performance of Daniel Pinckhom's Sinfonia Socia. The high point of the program was the exquisite performance given by four members of the Boston Symphony who are Newton citizens. Through the graciousness of these artists, who donated their time, as well as the fine student performances, the Music Club Scholarship Fund was substantially enriched, and Newton High again was host to some excellent music.

"For with their music, the sirens cast a spell on he who hears them."

Homer

The NHS Symphony Orchestra always seems to have a fine year. This year was no exception; under the inspiring Mr. Donald March the Orchestra played at class and house assemblies, the National Honor Society and Christmas Programs, the Senior Play, and the Spring Concert. Urged on by this demanding schedule, the musicians worked hard in learning to perform and appreciate many types of fine music. With this industry and skill small wonder that the orchestra cast a spell on those who heard it perform.

"Strength and might and craft were in their works."

Hesiod

Dressed in their sharp blazers the members of the Marching Band represented Newton High at football games and in local parades with veritable "strength and might and craft." The material of the Marching Band was of all rhythms and genre, but in all the Band displayed a buoyant spirit which rubbed off on all of us at Newton High.

When fall departs this spirited outfit becomes the Concert Band. Members of the Concert Band developed brass, woodwind, and percussion ensembles, and performed in many local concerts. The music of the Concert Band was a little more refined and sophisticated, but the spirit of the Marchers remained.

Conductor: Miss Geraldine Seaver

The Mixed Chorus is not primarily a performing group. The members of the Chorus learn to sing four-part harmony and acquaint themselves with the varied types of choral music. They also listen to records of choruses and entertain guest speakers and performers. The Chorus experience serves to prepare students for the other groups of the Music Department, such as A Capella Choir. Love of music, ability to carry a tune, and a cooperative spirit are the characteristics of the enthusiastic singers in the Mixed Chorus.

A CAPELLA CHOIR

Miss Seaver
Choir Director

Conductor: Miss Geraldine Seaver

"They are called pure spirits dwelling on the earth."

Hesiod

The A Capella Choir of 1962-63, Newton High School's most selective large choir, made a large contribution to the high caliber of music at NHS. The Choir sang in a number of class assemblies as well as in the school's Christmas Program for the benefit of the Music Club, the Spring Concert, and the graduation exercises.

The A Capella Choir sings four-part harmony in a variety of musical compositions—from masses and patriotic songs to modern works and madrigals. They work in several foreign languages, particularly Latin and Hebrew. As well as performing in concerts, Choir members learn the fundamentals of correct breathing in singing and vocal exercise. Many of the members, having received this training in the art of group singing and cooperation from the conductor, Miss Seaver, go on to college choirs and local singing groups.

GIRL'S CHORUS

Conductor: Miss Geraldine Seaver

*"And take a mild and modest cup . . .
Twixt pretty songs on themes that matter."*

Anacreon

The Girl's Chorus is made up of girls who enjoy singing in two and three part harmony. The girls gain experience singing many different types of musical forms in a large group. They also perform in the school's Christmas assemblies, Spring Music Night, and yearly opera sing with other high schools. Should you hear a chorus of clear sopranos from the depths of Building II, it's undoubtedly the Girls' Chorus practicing their favorites.

ORCHESIS

"Beware lest you lose the substance by grasping at the shadow."

The members of Orchesis (from the Greek orchesis: dance) are examining the dance as a means of expressing themselves and of communicating with others. They might spend a typical afternoon searching for the different ways of expressing anger or joy. They work on improving their dance techniques, but spend most of their time without any formal instruction merging the music, the dance floor, their actions, and their ideas into a meaningful composition. The group which always choreographs its own dances performed at an all-girls' assembly and at a PTA program.

MADRIGALS

"They are all of one mind, their hearts are set upon song."

Hesiod

The Madrigals, proteges of the Muse Polyhymnia, would make their cultural mother proud. This group of seventeen outstanding singers devoted their X-Blocks and other valuable time to rehearsing varied kinds of advanced music. They performed for various grade school in Newton, sang in concerts at Newton High, and gave special performances including one at City Hall on Veterans' Day. Later in the year they represented Newton High School at the Music Educator's Convention in Springfield. Under the skilled musicianship of Miss Seaver this group of select singers almost rivals the Muses.

In 1962 Newton High's football team had its first winning season in four years climaxed on Thanksgiving Day by Newton's first victory over Brookline since 1956. The Tigers' overall season record was 5 wins 3 losses, with 4 wins and 1 loss in league competition—good enough to place them in a three way tie with Brookline and Arlington for the Suburban League Championship.

But the 5-3 record does not begin to tell the whole story. Newton played the toughest schedule in the state this season, with four of its opponents among the top five in class A, and six of them undefeated when they played Newton. Twice the Tigers were beaten by individual outstanding performances: by Everett's High School All-American Bob Leo and Beverly's All-Scholastic Dave Manuel. Newton's only league loss, to Arlington, was a tight, well-played game which the Tigers could have won if they had not had a few bad breaks.

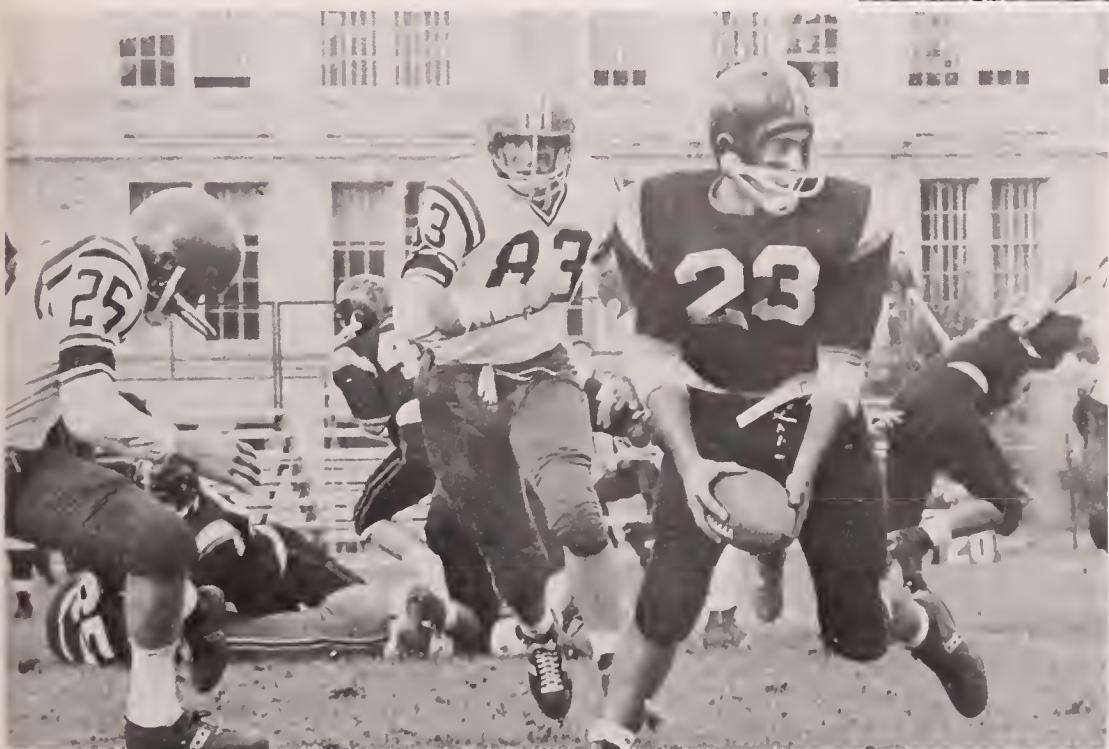

Many of the season's highlights come to the mind of every fan: Steve Carroll's determined 21 yard touchdown run against Brookline, spoiling their bid for the Class A title; Marty O'Gorman's brilliant 80 yard scoring dash against Waltham; Mickey Beard's sparkling clutch performances against Brookline, Brockton, and Waltham; John Rosenberg's alert defensive play; the Mechem option; Jeff Hick's consistently strong performances at end; the blocking of Kemelgor, Crosby, Parent, Heath, Halstead, Kozlowski, and Co. against Brookline; and the "Junior" defense's clutch play against Arlington. All these individuals made for a strong team and an exciting season.

First-year coach Jim Ronayne did a magnificent job transforming a team that had won one game in two years into Suburban League Champions. Since most of the offensive backfield and defensive line return next year, along with the undefeated J.V., Coach Ronayne can look forward to another fine year.

All the time new games. I was just getting used to the old ones.

The Newton High School Physical Education Department, affectionately known as fizz-ed by its many loyal supporters, had a banner year for 1963. Aided by strong support from Washington and new blood in both the girls' and boys' divisions, this well-oiled team eked out narrow victories over such perennially strong competition as the Walnut Delicatessen and the ever popular nurse's office.

Fine team efforts sparked by spectacular performances in the calisthenic and shower events provided many thrills for all involved. With increasing support on all fronts and many 1963 varsity standouts returning next year, prospects are good for another winning year in 1964.

A young group in a newly-formed league of seasoned competitors, the Newton High Cross Country Team swept the four-way Suburban League championship meet in a fitting climax to a grueling but gratifying season.

The harriers won all but two league meets, losing hard-fought clashes with a strong, experienced Waltham team by identical 34-21 scores. Although there were outstanding performances such as Finkle's 13:57 record for the Newton course, the success of the young Newton team depended primarily on a strong, consistent team effort such as that which made possible dual victories over Newton South by 26-30 and 28-29 scores. Seniors Tom Weiskel, Dick Penta, John Kwitkor, and Glenn Ellis, and junior Bruce Selvey turned in consistently superior performances to supplement the record breaking efforts of junior Bernie Finkle, who will be next year's team captain.

The Newton High Basketball Team finished a hard-fought hard-luck '63 season with a dramatic 65-63 overtime victory against heavily favored arch-rival Brookline. This was the second time this year a spirited Newton team scored an upset victory over Brookline in a major sport. The seven-win twelve-loss record Newton compiled over the rest of the season, however, gives little indication of the fine job done by first-year coach Al Fortune in molding a strong, aggressive unit out of a team which had finished last for two consecutive years in the always-tough Suburban League. This year the League sported exceptionally strong teams such as Brockton, Rindge, and Brookline, and provided the toughest competition in Massachusetts.

Among the season highlights: Steve Friedus' two foul shots with five seconds remaining in overtime to defeat Brookline; Mickey Beard's consistent high scoring and clever play-making; Jeff Hick's clutch scoring and rebounding; Steve Friedus' spectacular hustling, ball-handling and defensive play; invaluable team efforts from Eliot Grupp, Ed Keefe, and Dick Sorota; promising aggressive play from juniors Sam Rosenberg and Joe Gill; and the fine team efforts against Brookline, Weymouth, and Newton South.

With Rosenberg, Gill, and other promising underclassmen returning prospects are bright for a winning '64 season.

Hey buddy! Why don't you signal before you turn?

Watch it Sam, that's an illegal hold.

And to the great god Basketobolus we offer up this . . .

Don't say gimme!

He's good, but with four arms and four legs, how can you miss?

Hi Mom! Hi Dad!

INDOOR TRACK

FIRST ROW: J. Sheely, W. Horner, C. Lundquist, J. Slauitts, M. Fradkin, J. Norcross, T. Gabis, T. O'Day, D. Nelson, T. Wooten, R. Penta, B. Scrimshaw. SECOND ROW: R. Aisner, C. David, J. Kwitkor, J. Volk, B. Clayton, J. Hoover, J. Gergian, J. Tamto, R. Williams, R. Shikore, B.

Finkle, C. Doherty. THIRD ROW: P. Dexter, N. Epstein, Captain L. Kemelgor, E. Meyer, J. Delahanty, M. Burlingame, G. Johnson, J. Koslowski, S. Londo, R. Arra, R. Steibel, Ass't. Coach M. Gallagher, Head Coach L. Boyle.

The NHS Indoor Track Team, the Yankees of the Met league, this year chalked up another in a sensational string of successful seasons under the direction of two of Newton's finest coaches, Mr. Lamoine Boyle and Mr. Malcolm Gallagher.

Displaying their now-characteristic depth coupled with exceptional strength in the field events this season, Newton ripped through six straight dual meets knocking off the toughest competition Division I of the Metropolitan track league could muster. The B.A.A. Class A Champion Rindge Tech team alone possessed the power to topple the injury-riddled tigers in the season's final meet.

Outstanding competitors for the '63 season include: Co-Captain Ed Murtha, undefeated in the 300-yard event previous to suffering a severe leg injury, Jan Koslowski in the sprints, Jim Delahanty in the hurdles, senior shot-putters John Morganthau and Co-Captain Larry Kemelgor, Dick Penta and Glenn Ellis in the 600, Peter Dexter in the 1000, and junior miler Bernie Finkle.

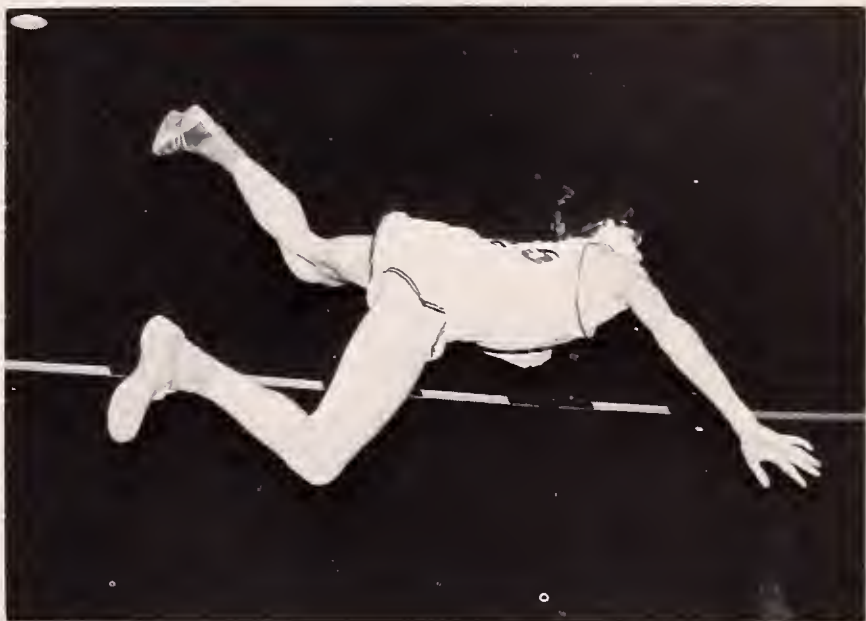

Although the seniors will be sorely missed a successful '64 season is assured for this powerful, well-balanced team.

Watch it Glenn, he's got the drop on you.

The celebrated jumping frog of Middlesex County.

It's not the race that bothers me, it's these darn obstacles.

Relax, boys, the hot dog stand will be open all afternoon.

GYMNASTICS

VARSIY GYMNASTICS

President Kennedy has been complaining that today's young Americans are not in the best of shape. While we cannot deny the obvious imperfections of some of our students, we are certainly pleased with the physique and record of the NHS gymnastic team. Strengthened by Captains Frank Jones and Stu Smith and performers like Bob Rando and Rusty Martin, the gym team again posted a respectable record with some amazingly close and exciting victories (such as the 86.42 to 86.03 win over Braintree.) A relatively new sport (4 years) at NHS (abbreviation for Natural Herculean Strength) gymnastics has seen improved competition and increased spectator interest, especially among the females. Its main requirements are co-ordination (so that you don't fall off whatever you are on) and continual practice, which is often difficult in the limited gym space. Gymnastics can be a dangerous sport, too, as Coach Jessup realized when a year ago his team finally defeated highly regarded Wellesley, and the exultant gymnasts hoisted Jessup up on their shoulders, marched him around the gym, and tried to take him through a doorway four inches lower than his head. Jessup survived, however, and now predicts that in the next few years his teams will continue to improve and bring home many more victories.

It's just like jumping the fence at football games.

Now, how do I get off of the thing.

Darn it, they starched the pants again.

ICE HOCKEY

VARSITY HOCKEY

If you are a devoted hockey fan, you will probably look through these pages and be able to recall each frantic moment en route to the State Hockey Tourney. You will remember J. MacLaughlin's goal in the last instant of the second period in the Waltham game, and D. Toomey's up-the-middle effort that kept Newton tourney hopes alive. But there are things you didn't see, like those excruciating practices and the cacophonous locker room between periods, or the game at Exeter in two inches of rain, when T. Mechem decided to clear a spot for a face-off with his stick, and succeeded in half-drowning everyone around him in great waves of water.

And if you are a player, you will remember each Senior for his own outstanding achievement: Newall's splits, MacLaughlin's fights, Scammon's twice broken nose, Fox's high slap shots, Goldbaum's sneaky goals, Nicolazzo's hip checks, and Mechem's hustle. Each was distinctive, yet they combined as a team in another successful schedule, so whether you are a spectator or a player, there will be absolutely no way that you can forget the Newton High Hockey Team of 1963.

Oh frabjous day!

Anyone around my goal will be it.

Richard please, I'd rather stop it myself.

Close your mouth, Mike—"nearies" don't count.

But Roger, you promised me this dance.

Attaboy Nick, play the puck.

TECH BASKETBALL

KNEELING: A. Quebec, Captain. FIRST ROW: Mr. Malone, G. Pendelton, D. Vito, W. La-Roche, R. Castoldi, A. Bianchi, J. Capello, W. Ryan.

Why are you smiling Alan, you're out of bounds.

The Newton Technical High School basketball team this year is a proud example of what hard work, cool-headed strategy, and solid determination can accomplish. It is a team that exemplifies all the idealistic placards and catch-words coaches post on locker-room bulletin boards.

Having lost six of the seven games in the first half of their season, the Tech high hoopsters engineered a spectacular turnabout. Lead by seniors Alan Quebec and William LaRoche, they played the same seven teams for the second half of their schedule and emerged with six wins and only one loss, and that to the League Champions by six points.

Newton Technical High School and Coach Robert Malone can be justly proud of this spirited and well developed team.

Camera-shy La Roche.

GIRLS' FIELD HOCKEY

VARSITY FIELD HOCKEY TEAM

FIRST ROW: S. Schwartz, L. Stepper, H. Udin, M. McManmon, J. Thompson, B. Huston, V. Tom, M. Bowen. SECOND ROW: E. Boiteau, J. Bell, C. Klein, M. Meyer, D. Fisher, C. Muther, A. Leighton, Mrs. Flink.

The Newton High School Varsity Girls' Field Hockey Team, paced by senior scorers Jane Thompson and Diane Fisher, this year completed one of the most successful seasons in recent memory. The 1963 junior varsity had a successful year as well.

A record number of candidates made possible a larger, improved schedule for both teams.

As enthusiasm and support continue to mount, we can look forward to many more fine seasons.

Here we go loop-de-loop.

No! It's my turn to throw the ball back to Mr. Ferguson.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL

GIRLS' VARSITY BASKETBALL

FRONT ROW: N. Stewart, N. Fisher, J. Thompson, G. Klein, F. Von Schulz, L. Stepper. SECOND ROW: T. Sumikana, M. Lovell, M. Bowen, V. Tom, J. Duane, D. Fisher, W. Wein, G. Howard, Miss Frasier.

The 1962-63 Girls' Basketball Team, though it played a limited schedule, had an exciting season because of a relaxation of several of the game's rules governing fouls and roving players. If enthusiasm continues to increase next year, girls can look forward to an expanded schedule and improved team.

Aggressive play under the boards.

Who put helium in the basketball?

FIRST ROW: P. Bogen, A. Leger, D. Russo, D. Kagan. SECOND ROW: C. Deats, G. Howard, M. Theller, G. Floyd, N. Schiller.

CHEERLEADERS

All we did was take a thorn out of his paw . . .

FIRST ROW: B. Murray, P. Rielly, G. Morgan, P. Landy. SECOND ROW: S. Houston, C. Blaquer, Head Majorette.

Oh What a beautiful morning!

SAILING CLUB

FIRST ROW: L. Trachtenberg, A. Leighton, D. Workbeck, S. Altmar, G. Oppenheim, M. Steinman, Secretary; J. Dealy, Vice-President; B. Rosenbaum, President; L. Wensley, D. Brickman, J. Rosenfelt, K. Levinson. SECOND ROW: M. Daniels, S. Baltimore, L. Klapper, F. Nesson, M. Yesley, M. Berman, D. Stone, D. Arnold, B. Fuoco, B. Rich, C. Burns, M. Lovell, S. Books, J. Arnold, S. Raleigh, M. Leahy, R. Mueller. THIRD ROW: M. Friedman, J. Winston, S. Shumon, R. Burns, D. Bubrick, G. Levinson, R. Marx, N. Bloomenthal, R. Mathews, J. Philpott, F. George, A. Huberman, F. Mansfield, P. Cohen, C. Hagelstein. FOURTH ROW: J. Duncklee, P. Jones, D. Lehrbreg, G. Herlihy, H. Masters, R. Horowitz, J. Ruaunti, R. Bouse, S. Riemer, W. Feldman, M. Schwartz.

The NHS Sailing Club this year, besides its traditional outings to Marblehead, sailing movies and lectures, initiated a program of sailing lessons for its members. Each entering member was given a written examination to determine his knowledge of sailing tools and technique and then depending on the test result, the entering members were offered sailing lessons: fundamentals for beginners and elements of racing technique for more advanced sailors. The new program of lessons along with the traditional activities helped to attract many more members this year and generally boosted enthusiasm.

OUTING CLUB

Moe: Hey, Joe, what's the Outing Club?

Joe: Outing Club? Oh, that's a bunch of girls what sell candy at the basketball games—you know, Hershey bars for 30¢, life savers for a quarter.

To the well-informed NHS student, however, the Outing Club is one of the most popular, most active, and most enjoyable girls' clubs in the school. In 1963 the Outing Club's most successful junket was the traditional winter sports weekend at Peterborough, New Hampshire.

Other activities undertaken by this outfit for fun and fitness include bowling, swimming, bike riding, hiking, and horseback riding.

RIFLE TEAM

FIRST ROW: J. Berenson, M. Demeo, M. Margolis, A. Poirier, J. Tocci. SECOND ROW: W. Purple, D. Bartlett, G. Herlihy, M. Maloney, T. Brown, Mr. Lent, Coach; Missing: K. Ford.

The Newton High School Varsity Rifle Team finished with a winning season for 1963 under the leadership of Coach Harry Lent and team captain Wakeley Purple. A thirteen man squad made up of seven seniors, three juniors, and three sophomores was chosen from the outstanding shooters in the Newton High School Rifle Club, an active organization of forty strong licensed by the National Rifle Association. Top Newton marksmen in the tough competition of the Middlesex Interscholastic Rifle league were Wakeley Purple, Al Poirier, Marty Margolis, and Don Bartlett. Purple turned in the season's top score, firing a near-perfect 190 in league competition.

RIFLE CLUB

FIRST ROW: Mr. Burse, Co-Advisor; G. Herlihey, T. Brown, Treasurer; M. Margolis, President; K. Ford, Vice-President; D. Margolin, Secretary; B. Rosenbloom, H. Wolf, Mr. Lent, Co-Advisor. SECOND ROW: I. Blank, P. Cokely, M. Mouarty, J. Philpott, J. Reed, D. Bartlett, P. Borson, J. Frank, R. Gouse. THIRD ROW: J. Gerson, M. Razza, M. Himmelfarb, R. Lubin, J. McShane, B. Mathews, C. McLean, P. Bloom, N. Ziergiebel. FOURTH ROW: D. Hayden, M. Demeo, D. Smith, B. Firger, J. Annis, R. Lemack, D. Jordan, R. Beddows, J. Murphy, V. Russo.

TIGERAMA

FIRST ROW: B. Huston, D. Wheelock, E. Henry, A. Bontempo, G. Genovese, C. Rubin, A. Kasabian. SECOND ROW: S. Calvert, T. Weiskel, M. Zolli, D. Hough, R. Newall, C. Sisson. THIRD ROW: J. Callanan, J. Cassaboom, M. Saxton, S. Appel.

Never before in the history of Newton High have such multitudes swarmed to the NHS institution of Tigerama (named after the popular orange and black symbol of Newton High). It promises to remain one sure social means of keeping the high school together. The Tigerama Committee plans to please all and comes out with formulas to attract everyone—that is, almost 1500 of everyone. Their original themes, the bizarre decorations, the swinging entertainment, evincing much enthusiasm and effort on the part of the committee, is what draws the record-breaking crowds.

JUNIOR PROM

"Life is joy. Cares begone! Short is the span of man's life. Wine and dance are today's. Today's are the flower wreaths and the girls. Let me live today supremely. Tomorrow, who knows?"

Palladas of Alexandria

A fine philosophy, at least once in a while, especially since the "cares" of studying for a math test or finishing an English paper seem very burdensome right now. And so, there was the night of the Blue Moon Junior Prom: Standing in front of the mirror a few extra minutes . . . saying "hello" in a special way almost as if both were meeting for the first time . . . dinner . . . talking . . . dancing . . . then a wistful memory . . . and a longing glance ahead to the Senior Prom.

"Poetry is something more philosophic and of greater import than history."

Aristotle

The ancient Greeks held contests not only for athletes, but for sculptors, painters, dancers, and bards. They fostered the development of the arts and honored the literary, graphic, and musical artistic giants of their time. The Newtonian, in the noble tradition of our spiritual and cultural ancestors, has sponsored a poetry contest. This year's subject is "In Praise of Newton High School." The fortunate winner will be named "Poet Laureate of Newton High School." Hundreds of poems have poured in to the Newtonian office from aspirants all over the country, but the entries have been narrowed down to the four below. You, the reader, will be the judge of the winning poem. Please note these entries excellent, good, fair, or awful; tear out this ballot along the perforated edge; and return it to room 1042. The results will be tabulated and the winner announced on February 30 of next year.

Newton High School, (may its numbers increase),
Has a club for war and a club for peace;
For Newton's clubs are just sensational!
It is ultra-organizational!
There's a club for you; a club for me—
I wish old Ben Adhem were here to see!
There's a club for sorrow, a club for cheer—
They've started an anti-club club, I hear.
They say an angel came to list and look
At all our clubs, (he filled his golden book)
And showed the names of schools that clubs had blessed
And lo! Newton High's name led all the rest.

LEIGH HUNTED

I think that I shall never see
A place lovely as Building Three
Whose transcript ends the quest
Of bleary-eyed students, sore oppressed.
Whose cafeteria yields great joys
To starving hordes of girls and boys
The gyms make weaklings physically fit
J. F. K.'s goals here make a hit!
And radiator pipes warm all
With never a chilled heart or hall.

Poems are made by fools like me
But God knows who made Building Three.

by JOYCE KILLSME

Little tests Germanic,
Little college boards,
Keep us out of mischief,
And in constant panic.

Little grades of "A" and "B",
Little cards of white,
Help make our parents happy—
And keep our faces bright.

JULIA CARNAL

Under a spreading maple tree
The Newton School House stands
The School, (a mighty school know ye),
Built up by eager hands;
Its lofty buildings: one, two, three,
Resist time's winds and sands.

Thanks, thanks to thee our worthy school
For the lessons thou hast taught!
For at this seat of wisdom wise
Our daily milk we've bought.
We've played football; marched in the band;
And sometimes—we have thought!

by HENRY W. LONGERFELLOW

"I will make you a king and will feed you on bird's milk and honey."

Aristophanes

The Senior Supper, as 300 kingly seniors can testify, was a grand success. The corn fritters were delicious no one minded too much if the roast beef went 'Mooo' and ran away when poked with a fork. Entertainment was provided by a take-off on the Steve Allen show done by Jon Margolis and Jim Callanan and their "guests". Even the advertisements resembled the Steve Allen Show:

"Hebrew National Kosher Salami

Makes your meals seem summer balmy."

Mike Zolli and someone who knew how to dance displayed their talents in ballet, Ken Burke blew up balloons and the hockey team sang a song off-key. Jim Callanan spilled a gallon of tomato juice onto his script. Some vampire kept running onto the stage looking for his senior supper but he had to go hungry because his supper was what Jim had spilled. Mr. Mechem, after assuring the prize-keeper of his presence in the crowd, with a hearty yell was presented with a door prize, a full-size Hebrew National Kosher Salami. He put the salami in his shirt pocket. It didn't fit.

Afterwards, the gym—having served as a cafeteria and an auditorium—came into its own to provide the floor for an evening of square dancing.

Aeschylus

Of the many things that are necessary in the production of a school newspaper, the majority were newly instituted as the Newtonite went to press in September. Although it took the new printer, the new advisor, and the new editor a little time to familiarize themselves with the mechanics of running the paper, the student body has witnessed increases in both the accuracy and amount of coverage of school events, in the diversity of material, and in the quality of the printing.

"Now, we have the paper on its feet. Don't you think it's time we did something about this office? It could use paint, curtains, better desks, more light . . ."

"But then it wouldn't look like a real newspaper office."

REFLECTIONS

"If you wish to be a good writer, write."

Epicretus

Reflections, 1963, is the collected cogitation of Newton High School, 1963, in printed form. Timothy Putnam, with his hands upon the manuscripts and his eye upon the publication date, led the staff gallantly from the creation of a corporate image through hours of reading, discussion, and evaluation to the correcting of galley proofs. The staff culled from all the submitted material the best prose, poetry, and art to preserve for posterity the mind-word of Newton High School, 1963.

ORANGE BOOK

"To give me information is thy office."

Euripides

A new cover, a new format, and new plans for the future, but still the same "office": to give information about Newton High—its history, its traditions, its rules and opportunities. This year, the Orange Book, having become too wieldy to fit in a pocket changed shapes for both aesthetic and practical reasons. Deciding that juniors and seniors either knew enough about Newton High or should be eager enough by this time to pay for their knowledge, the Orange Book was distributed free only to sophomores. A supplement, attached to the Orange Book for sophomores and given free to juniors and seniors, (with notebook holes punched on the side—an idea for which Mr. Warshaw deserves a patent), was printed for the first time, containing all NHS temporal information. This was the last annual edition of the Orange Book: from now on, there will be a regular edition printed once every three years and only a new supplement each year.

With this Board rests the delicate and awesome responsibility of overseeing NHS publications. The Board chooses editors for the Newtonian, the Newtonite, the Orange Book, and Reflections. In addition, the policies, shortcomings, and the gains of all Publications are debated behind closed doors. The literary geni of NHS can thank their guardian for four fine publications.

"How prone to doubt, how cautious are the wise."

Homer

Four stalwart sons of Newton High are anxiously searching through the cobwebbed corridors of their minds. Where is that cursed fact? Triumphant over tension, long disuse of frequently insignificant information, and sometimes obscure questions, someone answers correctly. "Ten points for Newton." The moderator now questions the enemy while the Newton men gird themselves for the next struggle.

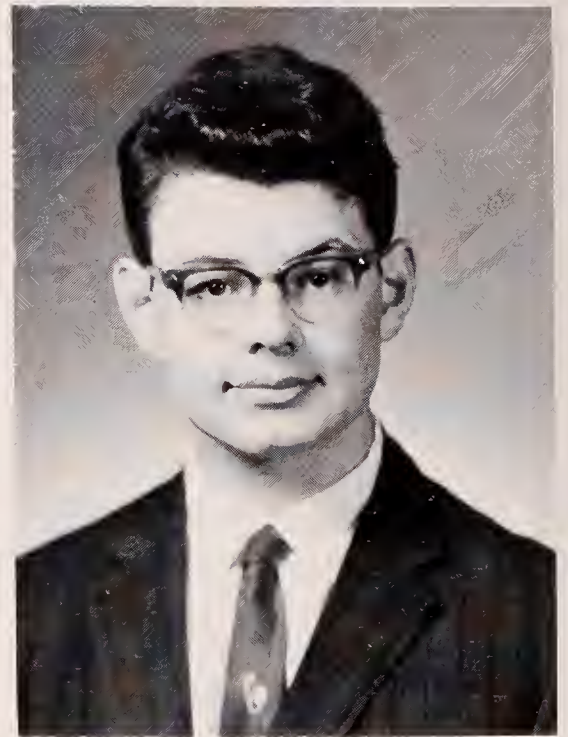

"The captains of each team will choose a ten, twenty, or thirty point question." At last! A chance to think! But the captain feels like Atlas bearing the world on his shoulders. The battle grows more desperate, and the gods join the fray. Suddenly it's over.

Newton High won every match but one this year. That one was on television.

DRIVER EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

Mr. Weist, Mr. Cahill (Newton Motor Sales), Mr. Keery (Frost Motors), Mr. Druckemiller (Clay Chevrolet), Mr. Toscani, Mr. Penta. Missing: Mr. Dwyer (Newton Buick).

Mr. Weist and Barbara Chabot receive an award for Newton's outstanding Driver Education Program.

The one course given at Newton High that most directly affects the daily lives of every student is Drivers' Education. Although this course is sometimes thought to be a "snap course," Mr. Weist and his department are charged with an awesome responsibility: keeping students and the general public out of the fell clutch of automobile accidents.

There are many facets to the Drivers' Education program, and almost every student is familiar with them. But the real purpose of the course, forming the attitude of students towards the use of the automobile, cannot be capsulized into any curriculum, visual aid, or teaching gimmick. The graduates of the Drivers' Education program at Newton High reflect the sincere and understanding attitude of Mr. Weist and his staff.

SKI CLUB

A ski club member is easily recognizable. He displays a strange inability to sit down on Monday mornings and mumbles obscurely about moguls, packed powder, jay bars, and the relative merits of Head skis.

This year more than one hundred such ski club members avidly discussed the ski conditions northward, and rejoiced at reports of snow. This staunch group of enthusiastic, and occasionally expert skiers, under the leadership of Mr. Rist, bravely rose at 4:00 A.M. to journey north to such skiing areas as Mt. Snow, King's Ridge, and Okemo. Whether they snow plowed or christeed, all the ski club members demonstrated the same enthusiasm for skiing, proudly wearing the new NHS ski club patch. And for the skeptics: there were no fatal injuries. So there.

KEY CLUB

"Hard it is wholly to win worthy manhood, with hand and foot and heart alike to be foursquare."

Simonides

The Key Club of Newton High School is a service organization. The members of the Key Club, an affiliate of Kiwanis, engage in community service projects and fund raising for charitable causes. In addition to the fact that their activities assist worthy causes, an all-day car wash for a children's party can be a lot of fun. And the members of this organization feel that that is where the satisfaction lies—in helping others.

FUTURE TEACHERS OF AMERICA

"That education should be regulated by law and should be an affair of state is not to be denied, but what should be the character of this public education, and how young persons should be educated are questions which remain to be considered . . . Neither is it clear whether education is more concerned with intellectual or with moral virtue."

Aristotle

How often we hear of the shortage of teachers in America. Newton High School is doing its part to help in filling the serious lack, and moving forward. The Future Teachers of America Club helps to prepare the prospective elementary or secondary school teacher for the responsibility he wishes to assume.

Under the direction of Mr. Jacobs, these teachers of the not-too-distant future visited local elementary schools in order to acquire practical knowledge of the problems of teaching. In addition, educators and administrators addressed the club on what rewards and drawbacks to expect in the teaching profession.

Fortunately, these future teachers came to believe that the rewards far outweigh the drawbacks.

"Man's noblest task is to help others by his best means and powers."

Sophocles

To the members of this club, the best means seems to lie in the medical profession. These dedicated future nurses meet together to discuss and learn more about their anticipated careers. It would have gladdened the heart of Sophocles to see this fine group following Hermes' Caduceans into medicine.

JUNIOR RED CROSS

"Who does not befriend himself by doing good?"

Sophocles

The Red Cross High School Council has one goal—to help other people, especially children. This year the council collected more than $200 which was given to the International Childrens' Fund and the local chapter service fund. In January the group held its annual coffee hour at the Veterans' Hospital. The members of the Council filled a chest holding supplies for a class of 48 children for one school year and sent it to a disaster area. Students on the Council were able to help others by serving at Bloodmobile Canteen, by serving lunch to student tree-planters at Edmands Park one afternoon, and by working with bedridden or mentally retarded children. Needless to say, the members of the Red Cross Council receive much satisfaction from their worthy work.

RALLY COMMITTEE

The 1963-64 school year saw one of the most active rally committees in our recent history. The members of the committee worked especially hard during the football season to stage the colorful and amusing rallies that helped produce large quantities of that out-of-stock item—school spirit. Whether staying up late to make publicity posters for the Saturday games, thinking up skits for the Friday afternoon rallies, wearing black and orange beanies, yelling with the cheerleaders, or in the case of a few courageous boys, baring legs and building up elsewhere to spoof the cheerleaders, all the members of the rally committee had a wonderful time.

"What is sought for can be caught; only that which is not watched escapes."

Sophocles

Good photography is an art. It renders personal experience communicable by making a well-chosen aspect public and permanent—as a photograph. The Camera Club is dedicated to this art of cramming the impact of an experience into a pattern of dark grains on white paper. The club members learn how to use a complex technology for artistic purposes. Choose a film fast enough to freeze action with a short exposure and get depth of field with a small aperture—but slow enough to be fine-grained so as to yield good enlargements. Moreover, . . .

Behold the photographer: He adjusts little knobs and levers, numb-fingered in a wintry gale, or dashes to catch a fleeting shot, apparatus-laden under an August sun, . . . lies on muddy ground to get just the right point of view . . . makes a dozen crucial decisions in seconds . . . squeezes the shutter, and then . . . he notices that he FORGOT TO REMOVE THE LENS CAP!!

"Yet is nothing without blame in the world of men."

Parrhasius

This seems especially true in the NHS cafeteria. Rubbish on the floor, trays left on tables, chairs in the middle of aisles, late comers-in to check on, impatient goers-out to hold back. This is the scene confronting every loyal member through four lunches in the cafeteria. For their gentle requests to the public to "take your rubbish with you" they usually receive icy stares—or even worse, are completely ignored. In your usually thankless job, at least accept our appreciation, Orange Shield. You're an admirable outfit.

HOMEROOM MANAGERS

"Before virtue the immortal gods have put the sweat of man's brow."

Hesiod

The duties of the staunch band of students known as the "homeroom managers" require imagination and salesmanship—especially the latter. Consider what a typically over-worked homeroom manager does during the school year: he sells S.A.T.'s, pointing out that they will offer a reduction of the price of the other things he sells; he distributes and sells New-tonites; he helps take attendance and reads the bulletin, and aids in keeping order during the chaotic Newton High institution known as "X blocks." An imposing list of duties. It should make us appreciate our homeroom manager, even if we decide that we're not hardy enough for this hard-working group.

OFFICE ASSISTANTS

"Feet are the most valuable there."

Archilechus

Feet—and a voice to answer the telephone, "Hello, student secretary speaking," and perhaps a little curiosity as to what goes on in the house or special-service offices are required in this job. The office assistants deliver notes and bulletins from their offices, take telephone messages, and do whatever odd tasks that need doing. Many NHS secretaries are convinced that their work depends on the help of office assistants to run smoothly and efficiently.

"Are we right in saying that there is one world, or that they are many?"

Plato

This year the American Field Service once again performed the admirable service of personalizing and personifying international relations. The students at Newton High School and the hosts here and abroad are to be commended for their generosity and hospitality. One must also admire the courage of the exchange students who brave the churning immensity of the ocean to cross strange borders into a new country, school, and family for the sake of a better world community.

NHS had two of its students abroad: Judy Dietz spent half a year in Germany and Bob Joyce journeyed to distant Chile. Keeping his eye on the home front was Chairman Jim Shane. All of us enjoyed knowing Tomoko Sumikawa, who came from Japan. To all who participated in this international program: we salute you.

"The thoughts of mine heart—I crave no more—Spoke with me and I was happy."

Euripedes

MOTION PICTURE SQUAD

"It is easy to be brave from a safe distance."

Aesop

"Well, take this film and slip the reel over the (crash) spindle so the (snap) kep fits in the slot. Then take the end of the film (swish—well, rewind it a little) and put it through this first gear (crinkle), then loop it up (not quite so tight . . .) and straight down behind the lens (greasy fingers . . .). Now, loop it again and pass it through that other gear (gently . . .) and let it glide over the trailing arm (yes, it bends, but NOT THAT FAR . . .), and out the back, and into the take-up reel. —What do you mean you don't have the right plug?"

Members of the Motion Picture Squad showed films and filmstrips for NHS and for various civic organizations this year as well as initiating NHSers to the fascinating intricacies of the projected image.

GIRLS' LEADER CORPS

Members of the Girls' Leader Corps, armed with whistles and wearing white blouses and shorts (this uniform being the greatest reward any NHS girl could want in the physical education department since its wearers are able to avoid the multi-colored, bloomer-pant, self-embroidered gym suits) aid the Physical Education Department in organizing classes and at the same time learn some fundamentals about gym teaching. They use their whistles to bring class to order, then take attendance and help set up teams and equipment for the activity of the day. They are often given special instruction before a particular sport season begins on the rules and use of equipment for that sport. These are fitting successors to the fleet Atlanta. Olympics, here we come!

FOLKSINGING

"A roar of glad throats echoed down the breeze."

Euripides

The Folksinging Club, now in its third year, continued to hold bi-weekly meetings at which one and all could come and sing. The Club was ready, willing, and able to sing almost any folk-song from Alabama Bound, to Zack, the Mormon Engineer, in languages from Bantu to Yiddish. The Club has also successfully resisted many powerful temptations—(over) organization, vulgarization of material, and over-instrumentalization. Highlights of the season were the Hootenannies at the Huntington Ave. YM-CA and the evening sessions with the South High group.

PAIDEA

"If you set your desire on philosophy you must at once propose to meet with ridicule and the jeers of many who will say, 'Here he is again, turned philosopher!'"

Epicretus

Each week the members of Paidea, the discussion group, meet at a private home to discuss some topic. Such matters as Good and Evil, Prejudice, Zen Buddhism, "Going Back to Nature," Mysticism, Poetry, and War have run the discussion gauntlet this year.

Members of Paidea—whoever wishes to attend a meeting—discuss matters which "puzzle or excite" them. They set forth problems and eagerly analyze the solutions of past and contemporary historians. Once aware of such varying opinions, they reevaluate their own ideas and start wondering about new questions.

Early this year in the town of Aiyetoro, Western Nigeria opened its first comprehensive high school. It is composed of a grammar school for college-bound students, a technical school, and a modern school offering a general education. This demonstration school, constructed on the site pictured below, was planned and built jointly by the Nigerian Government and the United States' A.I.D. (Agency for International Development). The United States Government delegated its role to Harvard University which then shared its responsibility with the Newton school system. The school has adopted the latest teaching programs: chemical-bond chemistry, PSSC physics, modern math. The school, whose students come from varied backgrounds, goes from 7th grade to freshman year in college, with the same faculty members teaching the entire age range. The faculty is now composed of fifteen Nigerians and fifteen Americans. Once the school is firmly established, it will serve as a model in academic methods and architectural design for high schools throughout Nigeria.

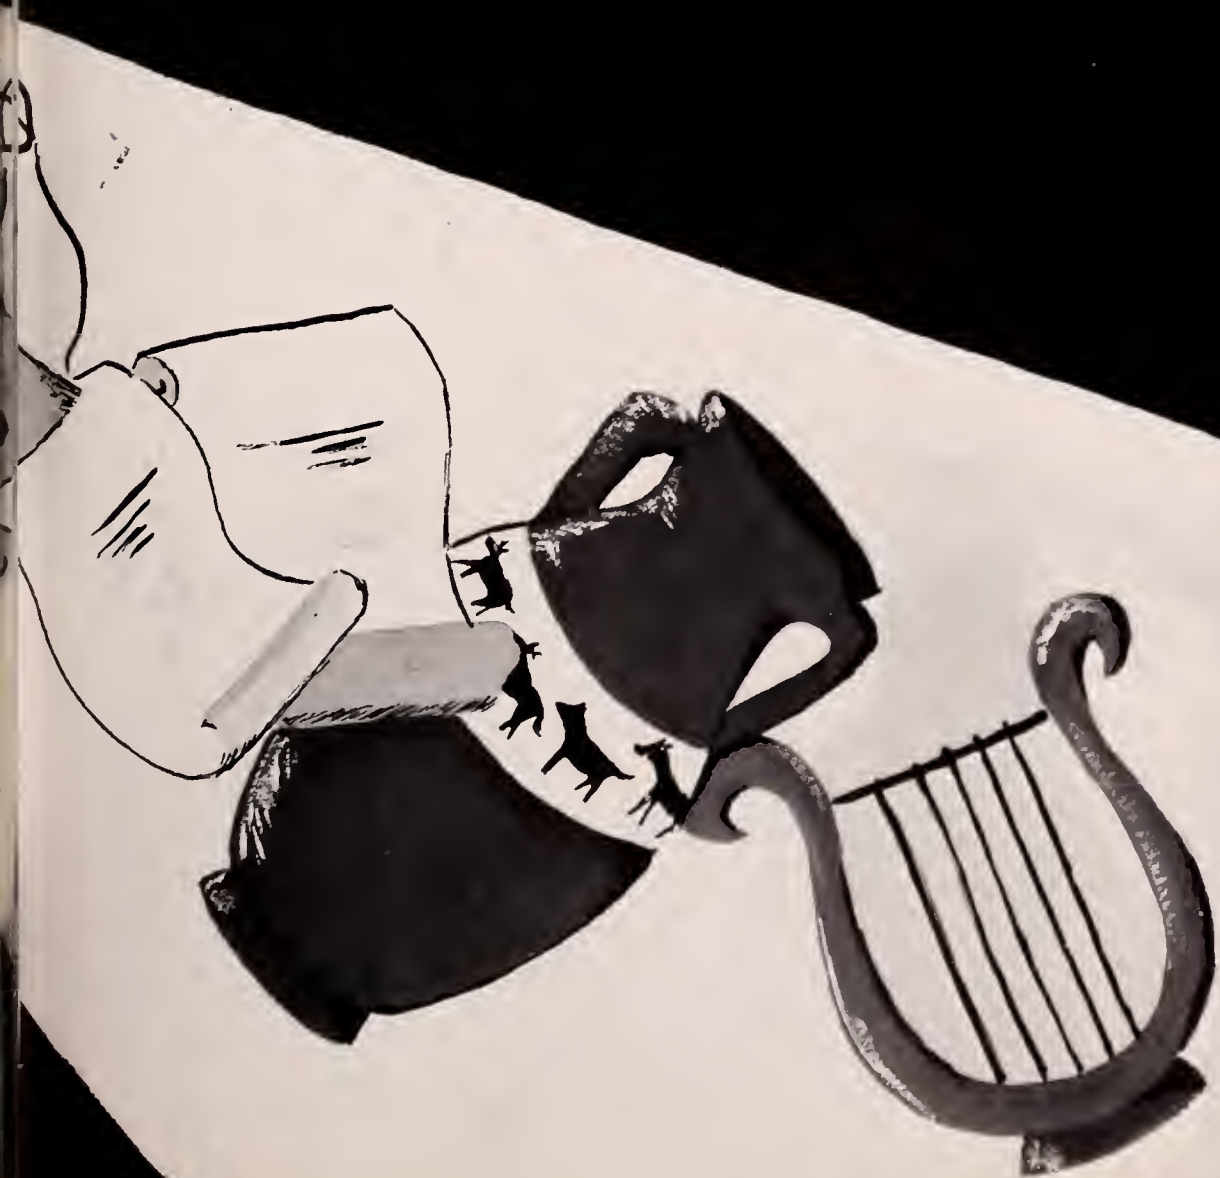

Mr. Spencer C. MacDonald

We have spoken much of the value of appreciating a heritage. This year, Mr. Spencer MacDonald and Miss Bonnie Allen, two NHS teachers, transplanted themselves and their heritage to Nigeria. They will give of that heritage at the school in Nigeria. And perhaps, they will find a means of better examining and evaluating their own heritage by seeing it in the light of another.

SENIORS

"Those having torches will pass them on to others."

Plato

A short time ago Newton High School was for all of us only a place where we would spend three years. Some walked up the steps that first day, hands outstretched, eager to receive what was going to be passed on. Others walked in with hands clenched tightly in pockets, prepared to remain indifferent for three years. Something was handed out on that very first day—something more than a homework assignment or a book receipt—something that still keeps coming today. It is strange and intangible. Quite naturally it became part of those who entered with hands outstretched. When those who had resolved to accept nothing unclenched their fists and pulled them out of their pockets, they found it belonged to them, too.

It is made up of the discussion of Macbeth in English class one day when Shakespeare turned out to be really exciting, in the biology lab when worms were on the examination table right after lunch, in the chemistry lab when an acid and a metal were combined and bubbled into hydrogen gas. There was that well-turned sentence in a foreign language and the thrill in math when the loose pieces suddenly fitted together perfectly. It was recognizing the events of our history textbooks recurring in the world. The afternoon jam-sessions and the Tigeramas and dances were part of it. There was the disappointment when Newton lost the State Hockey Finals in '61 and the pride when Newton beat Brookline to become Suburban League Football Champs in '62. And then there is the thought of saying "hi" in the corridors to so many more people today than three years ago.

All this might be called a torch. It contains and gives light and warmth. It is easy to grasp and can be handed to others without losing its radiance. And this seems to be our role as Seniors—to pass this torch on . . . and to look ahead toward the glimmer of a new one.

ELECTRONICS ENGINEERS GET CURIOUS— AND LOOK WHAT HAPPENS AT RAYTHEON!

Surely we do encourage free-wheeling, no-holds-barred curiosity in this fast moving field of electronics! Here at Raytheon, for example, it's the constant interest of our people in exploring new ideas that leads every day to new and exciting electronics developments. Examples: "DataRay" equipment to transmit punched card data by telephone . . . weather radar to warn of approaching storms . . . lasers, a key to space communications. For the young man or woman eyeing a career, the electronics industry is filled with satisfying and rewarding opportunities. Raytheon Co., Lexington, Mass.

A TELEPHONE JOB

OFFERS BOTH CAREER

AND SOCIAL SATISFACTION

WITHOUT BREAKING STRIDE,

why not graduate from high school to the Telephone Company? You'll love the friendly young people who'll work with you, and the many social activities that make your work so pleasant and rewarding.

OPPORTUNITY IS EXCELLENT

and your ability will be recognized. Your starting salary should climb with regular increases. And, of course, Company benefits, security, and regular advancement are well-known reasons why working for the Telephone Company is so attractive to graduates.

TELEPHONE JOBS ARE IMPORTANT, vital to the effective communications of the community, the nation, and the world. When you take your place as a respected member of the telephone community, we'll train you, on full salary, even without previous job experience.

Why not come and see our employment interviewer soon . . . before you graduate? Ask your Guidance Counselor to tell you when and where to apply.

The editors of the 1963 NEWTONIAN wish to thank all those at NHS who cooperated in the creation of this yearbook. We have had many memorable experiences from hunting for Greek quotations to the all-night work sessions before deadlines.

And all of us owe a debt to our advisor and friend, Mr. Rossi, for his tireless and inspirational guidance.
